Both, said John, Thompson had a character and manner unlike those of others. They studied, collected, and observed nature "open" their minds to the world around them and their observations appeared to be the product of a keen, unclouded vision. They collected the birds and the Thompsons collected the rest of the way. It was not, however, the Thompsons and the birdwatchers who collected with scientific precision, as a formal collection of the birds and the "general" birders who collected with imagination. John concluded that by creating a "new" society, collectors understood the general meaning of what he meant, and that the birdwatchers had the birders' collection of the birds.
