The Civil Rights Movement

The Civil Rights Movement is known as a period of time in the 1950s and 1960s that really began about 100 years earlier, after the American Civil War. The Civil Rights Movement occurred because of the desire for racial equality after the end of slavery in America.

After the Civil War, the American South was a very racist place. There were no laws against segregation, which meant people were kept separate. There were no laws against discrimination, which meant people could be treated unfairly. There were no laws against discrimination, which meant people could be treated unfairly.

Ruby Bridges: A Young Hero

In September of 1960, segregation became ending for America's education system after the 1954 Supreme Court case of Brown v. Board of Education. As a part of the integration initiative, a six-year-old African American girl named Ruby Bridges was selected to attend an all-white school. She was the first of four African American students to attend an all-white school in the South.

Ruby was born in Bogalusa, Louisiana in 1946 and was the oldest of five children in a Mississippi-based family. The Bridges family moved to New Orleans two years later to work on the oil fields. In 1960, as she began her first day of school and she walked hand-in-hand with her parents to school. Her parents were not afraid of the segregation in the South. They were not afraid of the segregation in the South. They were not afraid of the segregation in the South.

As an adult, Ruby continued to be a role model. She was a role model and she was a role model. She was a role model and she was a role model. She was a role model and she was a role model.

American children access to white schools but more than this as school stories they also comment upon how structural racism operates in the classroom and mutates over the course of decades through the pedagogical practices depicted in literature for young readers Lesley combines approaches from critical race theory disability studies and educational philosophy in order to investigate how the educational market simultaneously constrains how racism in schools can be presented to young readers and also provides channels for radical critiques of pedagogy and visions of alternative systems The volume examines a range of titles from novels that directly engage the Brown v Board of Education decision such as Sharon Draper's Fire From the Rock and Dorothy Sterling's Mary Jane to novels that engage less obvious legacies of desegregation such as Cynthia Voigt's Dacey's Song Sharon Flake's Pinned Virginia Hamilton's The Planet of Junior Brown and Louis Sachar's Holes This book will be of interest to scholars of American studies children's literature and educational philosophy and history
