This connector goes to the window motor.
You can disconnect this now and test your replacement if you want.

This is the reset switch access.
Peel off this band-aid sticker after you are done installing new motor (or now if you want).

The one visible motor bolt.
The rest are inside.
