III. Hypothesis, Research Questions, or Goals of the Project

The overarching goal of the project is to determine what factors influence the collection, outcomes, and change over time of Course-Instructor Survey (CIS) ratings. The research questions to be addressed are:

- 1) What is the average response rate across campus?
- 2) Who is not filling out the CIS form by professor rank, course size, college of course, required vs. elective, lab vs. lecture, and semester?
- 3) What mediates overall course grade with overall instructor held constant?
- 4) Does lecturer faculty receive higher responses than other faculty positions?
- 5) How are course workload, probable grade in the course, and overall course rating related?
- 6) Are there changes over time in course and course instructor ratings (tenured and non-tenured)?
- 7) Does course length influence CIS scores?

Spatial inequalities and regional development Henk Folmer, Jan Oosterhaven, 1979-06-30 In September 1977 a Regional Science Symposium was held at the Faculty of Economics of the University of Groningen in the Netherlands Organized because of the recent establishment at the Faculty of Economics of a group that is engaged in teaching and research in the field of regional science the aim of the symposium was to make university members more familiar with regional science and to introduce the newly created group to the national and international scene Two separate topics were selected of potential interest to both researchers and policy makers The first spatial inequalities and regional development was chosen because of its central place in regional science Authors from several disciplines were asked to approach this theme from a general policy orientated point of view This ensured the enlightenment of the various dimensions of spatial inequality and its implications for regional policy The results have been collected in the volume Spatial Inequalities and Regional Development The second theme focused on spatial statistical analysis This branch of statistics is a relatively new one which receives growing attention among researchers in the field of applied regional science The meeting on this topic concentrated on new results of research on the use of appropriate statistical and econometric methods for analyzing spatial data The papers concerned have been collected into another volume Exploratory and Explanatory Statistical Analysis of Spatial Data

Urban Planning and the British New Right Philip Allmendinger, Huw Thomas, 2002-01-22 Did the 1980s and 1990s see the death of planning Exposing the myth that has grown up around Thatcherism leading experts from a wide range of land use policy areas examine the changes that were brought about in planning and the environment during the 1980s and 1990s and argue that much less was achieved than expected Urban Planning and the British New Right questions common assumptions about planning practices under Thatcherism concluding that the complex relationship of power between central local and national government requires a sensitivity to change that is inclusive rather than doctrinal This is a book that says as much about the administration institutions and processes of planning as it does about Mrs Thatcher's attempts to change it
