Read the following passage about the history of the internet. The passage has eight paragraphs. Each paragraph has a heading. The headings are numbered 1 to 8. The headings are in the left margin. The headings are in the left margin. The headings are in the left margin.

1. The history of the internet is a long one. It began in the 1960s when the US government wanted to create a network of computers that could be used to share information. This network was called ARPANET. It was the first of many networks that were created over the years. These networks were connected to each other, and this is how the internet was born.

2. In the 1970s, the internet was used mainly for government and military purposes. It was not until the 1980s that it became more widely used. This was because of the development of the World Wide Web. The World Wide Web is a system of interlinked hypertext documents that can be accessed via the internet. It is the most commonly used part of the internet.

3. The World Wide Web was created by Tim Berners-Lee in 1989. He was a British computer scientist who worked at CERN. He was the first to propose a system for linking documents together. This system was called the World Wide Web. It was the first of many systems that were created over the years. These systems were connected to each other, and this is how the internet was born.
