Woods, Andrew S. Flies, 2019-03-20 Go into partnership with nature she does more than half the work and asks none of the fee Martin H Fisher Nature has undertaken an immense amount of work throughout evolution The evolutionary process has provided a power of information that can address key questions such as Which immune molecules and pathways are conserved across species Which molecules and pathways are exploited by pathogens to cause disease What methods can be broadly used or readily adapted for wild immunology How does co infection and exposure to a dynamic environment affect immunity Section 1 addresses these questions through an evolutionary approach Laboratory mice have been instrumental in dissecting the nuances of the immune system The first paper investigates the immunology of wild mice and reviews how evolution and ecology sculpt differences in the immune responses of wild mice and laboratory mice A better understanding of wild immunology is required and sets the scene for the subsequent papers Although nature doesn t ask for a fee it is appropriate that nature is repaid in one form or another The translational theme of the second section incorporates papers that translate wild immunology back to nature But any non human non laboratory mouse research environment is hindered by a lack of research tools hence the underlying theme throughout the second section Physiological resource allocation is carefully balanced according to the most important needs of the body Tissue homeostasis can involve trade offs between energy requirements of the host and compensatory mechanisms to respond to infection The third section comprises a collection of papers that employ novel strategies to understand how the immune system is compensated under challenging physiological situations Technology has provided substantial advances in understanding the immune system at cellular and molecular levels The specificity of these tools e g monoclonal antibodies often limits the study to a specific species or strain A consequence of similar genetic sequences or cross reactivity is that the technology can be adapted to wild species Section 4 provides two examples of probing wild

Roads and Ecological Infrastructure Kimberly M. Andrews, Priya Nanjappa, Seth P. D. Riley, 2015-06-01 A practical guide that explains how we can design roads that are compatible with populations of small wildlife Few of us think twice about driving on roads Yet the very presence of roads and the act of driving on them can impact the ecological infrastructure that supports an animal's daily life What chance does a turtle have of successfully laying its eggs when it needs to traverse a busy highway Is it realistic to expect small mammals to breed when an interstate thoroughfare subdivides their population These are the sorts of challenges faced by small often slow moving animals challenges that road engineers and ecologists are trying to address For countless small species vehicles traveling at high speeds are nothing less than missiles shooting across migration pathways For too many animals the danger can lead to the loss of populations in part because they simply are not programmed to react to traffic Salamanders faced with a two lane road between the forest and their aquatic breeding site for example will typically cross that road regardless of the congestion The result can be hundreds of flattened animals in a single night Roads and Ecological Infrastructure is the first book to focus on reducing conflict between roads and small animals Highlighting habitat connections and the challenges and solutions from both transportation and ecological perspectives the volume covers various themes including animal behavior related to roads and design approaches to mitigate the negative effects of roads on wildlife The chapter authors from transportation experts to university researchers each promote a goal of realistic problem solving Conceptual and practical this book will influence the next decade or more of road design in ecologically sensitive areas and should prevent countless unnecessary wildlife fatalities Published in association with The Wildlife Society
