Bioremediation of Industrial Waste for Environmental Safety Gaurav Saxena, Ram Naresh Bharagava, 2019-06-29. Achieving environmental sustainability with rapid industrialization is a major challenge of the current scenario worldwide. As globally evident, industries are the key economic drivers but are also the major polluters, as untreated or partially treated effluents discharged from the industries are usually thrown into the aquatic resources and also dumped untreated. Industrial effluents are considered as the major sources of environmental pollution as these contain highly toxic and hazardous pollutants which reach far-off areas due to the medium of dispersion and thus create ecological nuisance and health hazards in living beings. Hence, there is an urgent need to find an ecofriendly solution to deal with industrial waste and develop sustainable methods for treating/detoxifying wastewater before its release into the environment. Being a low-cost and ecofriendly clean technology, bioremediation can be a sustainable alternative to conventional remediation technologies for treatment and management of industrial wastes to protect public health and the environment. Therefore, this book (Volume I) covers the bioremediation of different industrial wastes, viz. tannery wastewater, pulp and paper mill wastewater, distillery wastewater, acid mine tailing wastes, and many more, which are lacking in a comprehensive manner in previous literature at one place. A separate chapter dedicated to major industries and the type of waste produced by them is also included. This book will appeal to students, researchers, scientists, industry persons, and professionals in the field of microbiology, biotechnology, environmental sciences, ecotoxicology, environmental remediation, and waste management and other relevant areas who aspire to work on the biodegradation and bioremediation of industrial wastes for environmental safety.
