

Problem of School Violence and Shootings

Today, Americans live in constant fear of possible school violence, of a possible school shooting at any given time. However, school shooting rates in 2018 have not risen when compared to past decades (Kaste, 2018). In fact, since 1994, the occurrence of violent crimes in U.S. public schools have fallen drastically; over two-thirds as of 2013 (Cornell, 2016). The only growing academic is the increase of media coverage these events get, which is responsible for the constant fear and anxiety in students, parents, and educators. The media, in reaction to these crimes, covers the highest profile cases. As a result, Americans are left with negative impressions of public schools, and incorrect perceptions of the frequency of school shootings (Cornell, 2016).

While school shootings do undoubtedly occur, the frequency of them has not been "on the rise" (Cornell, 2016). Furthermore, a recent study found that, while roughly twenty four school age children were murdered every week in the United States, only about one percent occurred in school facilities (Cornell, 2016). Regardless, American communities have the duty to ensure that every child is safe at school, whether the odds are one percent or one hundred percent. In order to fulfill that civic duty and curb school shootings, steps such as implementing school resource officers and emergency training with technology must be taken immediately, as well as designing future educational buildings to withstand emergencies such as school shootings.

In ensuring that school shootings don't continue, the first step which should be taken is the implementation of increased school security personnel and armed officers, such as School Resource Officers (SRO's). An school resource officer is an official police officer, who has been sworn to protect the students of his/her assigned school, as well as uphold the law. According to the National Association of School Psychologists, "Because of their special training, school resource officers are the only professionals who should be armed in a school..." (Rosiak, n.d., pg. 5). In accordance with the National Association of School Psychologists, most of these specially selected police officers are experienced and have served in their local community previous to becoming a SRO (Rosiak, n.d.).

These valuable job positions have proven to influence students in a positive manner. One major responsibly of these specially selected law enforcement officers is to serve as a resource for troubled or difficult students, working to keep them from acting out unlawfully (Rosiak, n.d.). Some examples of possible unlawful actions include: student assaults and school shootings (Rosiak, n.d.). If it were not for these police officers, it is reasonable to conclude that there would be more violence, at varying levels, in America's public schools. One case-specific example of the positive outcomes brought by school guards is in NYC, where since 1998 over 5,00

Overcoming Inequalities in Schools and Learning Communities: Innovative Education for a New Century Rocio Garcia-Carrion, Roseli Rodrigues De Mello, Arnetha F. Ball, 2020-03-24 Educational inequalities have strongly impacted disadvantaged and underserved populations such as indigenous Roma migrant children students with disabilities and those affected by poverty A wide array of research has contributed to explaining the mechanisms and effects of inequalities in the achievement patterns dropout rates disengagement in the school experiences of children and youth traditionally excluded Research also suggests the negative consequences for child development including cognitive language and social emotional functioning of poverty and lack of quality education in the early years Consequently the current unequal access to optimal learning environments for every single child to succeed in education and to have a better life perpetuates the exclusion and neglects their right to education for those minorities This Research Topic aims at moving beyond causes and shed light upon effective solutions by providing successful pathways for integration and inclusion of the learners most heavily affected. Scholars worldwide are looking for successful actions with children, youth, and communities of learners historically underserved to overcome educational and social exclusion. These transformative approaches go beyond the deficit thinking and are grounded in theories, empirical evidence, and multidisciplinary interventions oriented towards achieving social impact, which refers to the extent to which those actions have contributed to improve a societal challenge. The international network of Schools as Learning Communities is advancing knowledge on deepening and expanding the impact of what has been defined as Successful Educational Actions (SEAs), that is, those interventions that improve students' achievement and social cohesion and inclusion in many diverse contexts regardless of the socioeconomic, national, and cultural environment of schools. Drawing on the evidence generated by this network of researchers to address the global challenge of inequality by studying educational actions oriented towards achieving social impact and potentially transferrable to other contexts, this Research Topic aims at deepening on this approach. In short, our purpose is that the contributions included in this Research Topic contribute to reduce educational and social inequalities and especially benefit those populations most in need.

Crime, Delinquency and Justice Ramesh Deosaran, 2007. This reader presents fresh insights on the rapidly expanding and changing crime-related problems in the Caribbean as well as provides information on new dimensions of crime and criminology that are occurring with increasing regularity. A path-breaking and comprehensive work, Crime, Delinquency and Justice: A Caribbean Reader has come at a time when all societies in the Caribbean region are grappling with crime in all its forms and when the structure of the justice system on which all these societies are founded is being challenged to adjust to changes in society locally and internationally. The work addresses both theoretical and practical issues indicated by the broad range of areas covered, including Theorizing a Caribbean Criminology, Juvenile Delinquency and Public Policy, Domestic Violence and the Criminal Justice System, Community Policing, Police Styles and Use of Force, Corrections, Crime Statistics, the Jury System, Drug Trafficking, Terrorism, Social Upheaval, and Political Violence and Human Trafficking. Much of the contributions are research and data-driven and overall have policy development as their focus. This makes the volume suitable for courses in criminology and criminal justice at both the undergraduate and graduate levels as well as for specialist courses in various aspects of policing and law enforcement.

Parliamentary Papers Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons,1903 Plenary Papers of the 1999 Conference on Criminal Justice Research and Evaluation--enhancing Policy and Practice Through Research: Looking at crime from the street level ,1999 Foreword This year s annual conference on criminal justice research and evaluation is a milestone of sorts Some 30 years ago the President s Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice noted with alacrity that the revolution of scientific discovery had largely bypassed the problems of crime and crime control The method of objective analysis that had been used with stunning success to raise living standards help people live healthier lives and explore the heavens had unaccountably failed to be applied to one of the era s most pressing problems To the great good fortune of succeeding generations the Commission in its wisdom recommended creation of a Federal research agency dedicated to the scientific study of crime and criminal justice with the aim of informing and aiding the work of practitioners The National Institute of Justice the agency established by Congress to carry out that mission has for the past three decades been seeing the returns on that investment multiply Criminology has become a respected field of scholarly inquiry and we have built an impressive body of knowledge that has helped us better understand criminal behavior and the justice system More important the results of scholarly inquiries have been and are being applied to the day to day operations of law enforcement corrections the courts and other elements of the justice system In the conference which revisited the Commission with the theme Enhancing Policy and Practice Through Research we saw how the investment continues to yield returns The plenary sessions in particular emphasized praxis research put to the service of real world situations Because of the distinctiveness of this year s plenary panels we decided to publish them in three separate volumes viewing crime from the street level addressing school violence through research based policy developed through an interdisciplinary approach and understanding the involvement of women and girls in the criminal justice system Sudhir Venkatesh and Richard Curtis bring the ethnographer s perspective to the analysis of street crime analyzing respectively the financial activity of gangs and recent trends in drug dealing Their method distinct from that of conventional quantitative social science calls for intensive observation over long periods and involves the quest for what is a iv specific to single places and times and what is generalizable The close up street level observations of study subjects offer singular insights for practitioners who deal with these individuals as offenders In this panel we also benefited from the perspective of Charles Ramsey Chief of the Metropolitan Police Department Washington D C His indication that drug trafficking and gang crime persist in his jurisdiction despite the overall drop in crime offers proof of the ethnographer s caution against facile generalization This year marks the first time the program offices of the Office of Justice Programs OJP the Corrections Program Office the Drug Courts Program Office the Executive Office for Weed and Seed and the Violence Against Women Office have joined the OJP bureaus as conference sponsors Because these offices work so closely with the practitioner community I feel their sponsorship is an added expression of their commitment to research I think they would endorse Chief Ramsey s succinct assessment of the role of research in affecting crime levels in the years to come as bringing to light findings useful for fashioning real world solutions The best way to predict the future the Chief said is to help create it Those who wish to read more can find abstracts of the conference sessions on the World Wide Web at <http://www.ilj.org> Jeremy Travis Director National Institute of Justice Papers of the School of American Archaeology ,1921 Mostly offprints of journal articles
