

NTE3102 Photon Coupled Interrupter Module NPN Transistor

Description:

The NTE3102 Interrupter Module is a gallium arsenide infrared emitting diode coupled to a silicon phototransistor in a plastic housing. The packaging system is designed to optimize the mechanical resolution, coupling efficiency, ambient light rejection, cost, and reliability. The gap in the housing provides a means of interrupting the signal with an opaque material, switching the output from an "ON" into an "OFF" state.

Insects as a group occupy a middle ground in the biosphere between bacteria and viruses at one extreme amphibians and mammals at the other The size and general nature of insects present special problems to the student of entomology For example many commercially available instruments are geared to measure in grams while the forces commonly encountered in studying insects are in the milligram range Therefore techniques developed in the study of insects or in those fields concerned with the control of insect pests are often unique Methods for measuring things are common to all sciences Advances sometimes depend more on how something was done than on what was measured indeed a given field often progresses from one technique to another as new methods are discovered developed and modified Just as often some of these techniques find their way into the classroom when the problems involved have been sufficiently ironed out to permit students to master the manipulations in a few laboratory periods Many specialized techniques are confined to one specific research laboratory Although methods may be considered commonplace where they are used in another context even the simplest procedures may save considerable time It is the purpose of this series 1 to report new developments in methodology 2 to reveal sources of groups who have dealt with and solved particular entomological problems and 3 to describe experiments which might be applicable for use in biology laboratory courses
