Bäuerle, 2013-11-11 Laser processing is now a rapidly increasing field with many real and potential applications in different areas of technology such as micromechanics metallurgy integrated optics and semiconductor device fabrication The necessity for such sophisticated light sources as lasers is based on the spatial coherence and the monochromaticity of laser light The spatial coherence permits extreme focussing of the laser light resulting in the availability of high energy densities which can be used for strongly localized heat and chemical treatment of materials with a resolution down to less than 1 μm When using pulsed or scanned cw lasers localization in time is also possible Additionally the monochromaticity of laser light allows for control of the depth of heat treatment and/or selective nonthermal bond breaking within the surface of the material or within the molecules of the surrounding reactive atmosphere simply by tuning the laser wavelength These inherent advantages of laser light permit micromachining of materials drilling cutting welding etc and also allow single step controlled area processing of thin films and surfaces Processes include structural transformation removal of residual damage grain growth in polycrystalline material amorphization surface hardening etc etching doping alloying or deposition In addition laser processing is not limited to
