

Putting Pow'r Pup to Work

Craft Print
Project No. 321

Mowing the lawn is not a chore—it's fun with Pow'r Pup. Castering wheels make it possible to push most mowers. Separate mower engine is a great advantage when working around trees and when backing up. The mower keeps on cutting, regardless of tractor speed.

Part 2

WHEN you have completed the mechanical work on Pow'r Pup, as described in August SCIENCE AND MECHANICS, there is one additional feature, the rear wheel fenders, that should be added. These protect you from being jostled against the wheels when riding on rough or muddy ground.

Make them out of $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. black iron pipe (Fig. 5A), covered with sheet metal. After cutting the pipe to the required lengths, bend the four long pieces with a plumber's hickey to the radius shown. File or grind the ends of the transverse pieces to fit between the curved upright members and weld them in place.

Make the four $\frac{1}{4} \times 2$ -in. hot rolled steel clips and bolt them to the bottom ends of the fender frames. Then weld the clips to the brake backing plates, positioning the top pipe of the fender frame about 1 in. above the tire. Cover the frames with 16 gage black iron sheet, securing it with #10 $\times \frac{1}{2}$ -in. self tapping screws. Smooth up all rough edges on the fenders, then paint them to match the tractor.

You Can Use Pow'r Pup with a variety of plows, mowers, and other gardening tools already on the market, many of which are available second hand. For lawnmowing, either pull or push-type reel mowers or rotary mowers can be adapted for use. Fig. 1 shows a Sears Roebuck 24-in. rotary mower attached to the front axle of the tractor with the hitch in Fig. 5C. Several Sears mowers can be used with this hitch or with slight modifications of it.

Make this hitch of $2 \times 2 \times \frac{1}{4}$ -in. angle iron, cut, drilled, and welded as shown. Attach the Sears mower to it with the $\frac{1}{4} \times 2$ -in. HRS strap. The clamping plates (Fig. 5C) permit the mower to be lined up with either the left or right wheels of the tractor for cutting along shrubbery and walls. The front end of the Sears mower is supported with two castering forks and brackets (see Materials List) bolted to the holes originally provided for the adjustable mower wheels. The mower wheels themselves can be mounted in the forks, using $\frac{3}{8}$ in. bolts as axles. Lead the mower throttle control back to a convenient point on the hood, as seen in Fig. 1.
