Plessy v. Ferguson Institutionalizing
Separate and Unequal

In the aftermath of American independence, free states began to see slavery and slavery as separate from the American South. In 1857, Plessy v. Ferguson decided that in 1896, the decision would establish the "separate but equal" doctrine, allowing segregation to be legalized in the United States for over half a century.

The case originated in Louisiana, which had enacted a law requiring separate accommodations for white and colored passengers. Homer Plessy, a Ferguson, was arrested for violating the law. He was charged with "interfering with the peace and good order of the community."

The Supreme Court, led by Chief Justice Roger Taney, wrote the majority opinion, stating that the Constitution did not guarantee equal rights for all citizens. The decision was a landmark case, as it allowed segregation to be legal in the United States for over half a century.

The decision of Plessy v. Ferguson was a landmark
