

Lesson 2.1 Residential Design

Preface

Effective residential design requires a wide range of knowledge and skills. The design process involves a variety of tasks, including site analysis, conceptual design, preliminary design, and construction documents. The design process is a continuous one, with the designer constantly refining and improving the design as more information is gathered. The design process is also a collaborative one, with the designer working closely with the client and other professionals to ensure that the design meets the needs of the project. The design process is a complex one, but it is also a rewarding one. The designer has the opportunity to create a space that is both functional and beautiful, and that meets the needs of the client. The design process is a journey, and the designer is the guide.

In order to create an efficient and cost-effective building, the designer must carefully consider building systems and structures. Building systems include supply, electrical, plumbing, and mechanical. Building structures include foundation, structural design, and building envelope. The designer must also consider the building's location, climate, and surrounding environment. The designer must also consider the building's intended use and the needs of the occupants. The designer must also consider the building's budget and the client's expectations. The design process is a complex one, but it is also a rewarding one. The designer has the opportunity to create a space that is both functional and beautiful, and that meets the needs of the client.

During the design process, the designer will work closely with the client and other professionals to ensure that the design meets the needs of the project. The designer will also work closely with the building systems and structures professionals to ensure that the design is feasible and cost-effective. The designer will also work closely with the building's location, climate, and surrounding environment professionals to ensure that the design is appropriate for the site. The design process is a complex one, but it is also a rewarding one. The designer has the opportunity to create a space that is both functional and beautiful, and that meets the needs of the client.

Learning Objectives

1. The student will be able to identify the potential of the property and the needs of the client.
