Career Technical Education Daniel W. Hancock, 2009-12 An estimated 30% of California's entering 9th graders do not finish high school. In L.A. County the dropout rate estimated at 55% is higher than the graduation rate. The current focus on career tech ed CTE is a measure of the intensity of the search for solutions. CTE with its real world relevance and project based learning is a way to engage students in education that is different than a purely academic approach. This study of CTE found encouraging evidence that CTE in its modern academically demanding form can deliver an alternative approach to learning that can keep students engaged, help improve grade point averages and prepare students for both the work world and higher education. Why We Teach Science John L. Rudolph, 2022-12-20 Few people question the importance of science education in American schooling. The public readily accepts that it is the key to economic growth through innovation, develops the ability to reason more effectively and enables us to solve the everyday problems we encounter through knowing how the world works. Good science teaching results in all these benefits and more or so we think. But what if all this is simply wrong? What if the benefits we assume science education produces turn out to be an illusion, nothing more than wishful thinking? In Why We Teach Science and Why We Should former high school teacher and historian of science education John L. Rudolph examines the reasons we've long given for teaching science and assesses how they hold up to what we know about what students really learn or don't learn in science classrooms and what research tells us about how people actually interact with science in their daily lives. The results will surprise you. Instead of more and more rigorous traditional science education to fill the STEM pipeline, Rudolph challenges us to think outside the box and makes the case for an expansive science education aimed instead at rebuilding trust between science and the public, something we desperately need in our current era of impending natural challenges and science denial.

Specifications Grading 2.0 Linda B. Nilson, Joseph A. Packowski, 2025-09-15 This second edition of the alternative grading classic revisits specs grading with a robust body of research exemplars and strategies to elevate the quality of student work, increase engagement and buy in, reduce faculty stress and cultivate students' career competencies. Nilson and Packowski present the unique characteristics of the specs grading schema, all of which simplify faculty decision making, reduce antagonism between the evaluator and the evaluated and increase student receptivity to meaningful feedback, thus facilitating a mutually beneficial rigorous learning process. Used consistently over time, specs grading can restore credibility to grades by demonstrating and making transparent to all stakeholders the learning outcomes that students achieve. This book features five new chapters stemming from firsthand accounts of dozens of instructors actively using specs grading and new material in six of the remaining eight chapters. It lays out the surprisingly simple transition process, positioning specs grading as the most viable and easy to use system available to faculty.

Grading for Growth David Clark, Robert Talbert, 2023-07-03 Are you satisfied with your

Charting a Course to Standards-Based Grading Tim Westerberg, 2016-08-24 What s the best way to ensure that grading policies are fair accurate and consistent across classrooms How can schools transition to a grading system that better reflects what students are actually learning Tim R Westerberg makes this journey easier by offering a continuum of options with four destinations on the road to improved grading and assessment Destination 1 critically examines such popular grading mechanisms as the zero extra credit the semester killer project averaging mixing academic performance with work ethic and refusing to accept late work and explains how they undermine objectivity and instead result in widely divergent grades for comparable work with major consequences for students Destination 2 invites educators to put assessment and grading into the larger context of a districtwide guaranteed and viable curriculum and lays out the organizational conditions and necessary steps to accomplish this goal Destination 3 brings parents and others on board with a multiyear implementation plan and community engagement strategies for introducing report cards that indicate student achievement by standards rather than or in addition to letter grades Destination 4 competency based education involves a total rethinking of the nature and structure of school leading to individualized education for all students However far they choose to go administrators and teacher leaders can turn to Charting a Course to Standards Based Grading for the quick wins and long term support and guidance they need to make the trip well worth the effort

Plus/Minus Grading: Solution Or Problem? Howard Johnston, 2012 Surprisingly the debate over grade systems seems to occur largely at the college and university level Few middle and high schools seem to have taken on the issue at least in any way that appears in the public literature Other opinions suggest that it is the discriminating quality of plus minus grading systems that make them useful A report to the Faculty Senate at Western Illinois University stated that The single most important argument in favor of a system of final grades that includes plus and minus grades is the increased accuracy of the grade as a reflection of student performance In addition plus minus systems are seen as an antidote to grade inflation since a student barely earning an A would receive an A rather than an A Those opposed to systems say that it is unfair particularly to students in the 3 5 4 0 range Will it take more effort to earn the A that they might have earned earlier A second concern is the pressure put on teachers to award a slightly higher grade The research and commentary offers no clear guidance on empirical reasons for shifting to a grading system It appears as if the benefits are determined largely by the intentions of the school in creating the system and the ways in which administrators and faculty implement it Ultimately grading systems rely on consensus among students faculty parents colleges and or employers about what the grades actually mean If a change is planned it appears as if all of these stakeholders should be involved in the discussion to assure that grades actually communicate with all of the people who need the information they provide References and Resources are included
