

PMB PSYCHOGRAPHIC CLUSTERS

Psychographic clusters are available in major product categories measured in PMB. The clusters comprise groups of people with similar attitudes towards the product category. Typically, there are four or five different groups for each product area.

Development of the clusters

Development started with an extended list of statements, covering the full of range of attitudes relevant to each product area. Correlation and factor analyses were then conducted for each product sector to establish the attitudinal dimensions relevant to the product area. Next the sample was split into two halves, and for each half the distribution of population along these dimensions was analysed to find clusters. The solutions from the two halves were then compared to determine the optimal numbers of clusters.

Next the entire respondent data set was analysed to produce final clusters by product, and to distinguish statements required to define respondents into those clusters from statements that essentially correlate with the factors. Only those statements required for assigning respondents to the clusters are maintained in the questionnaire.

In each PMB release, respondents are assigned to the pre-established clusters according to their answers to the questions in the questionnaire.
