Journal of the United States Army ,2014 Military Design Thinking Aaron P. Jackson,2024-09-30 This book examines the newly emergent field of military design thinking how it has been developed inside and outside of military doctrine and the paradigms that underlie its key thinkers and methodologies From the emergence of its initial methodologies in the late 1990s military design thinking s development rapidly accelerated in the mid 2000s in response to perceived failures of existing military doctrine and practice to adapt to the wars of the early 21st century To establish a foundation for exploring the significance of the challenge military design thinking presented to dominant approaches to warfare the early chapters in the book examine the ontology and epistemology of military doctrine which is defined as a written expression of a military s institutional belief system regarding how to wage war They also explain how attempts to incorporate military design thinking into doctrine ultimately led to its assimilation into this belief system requiring military design thinkers to continue to explore and develop the field outside of doctrine Since the mid 2010s non doctrinal military design methodologies have become increasingly prominent within several Western militaries including the US Canada UK Australia and several European militaries Later chapters offer an exploration of the paradigms underlying non doctrinal as well as doctrinal design methodologies This book highlights how the field has evolved shows how military design thinking differs from its civilian equivalents developed in fields such as commerce and business management and discusses how it may evolve in the near future This book will be of much interest to students of military studies security studies and international relations as well as to military professionals Thinkers and Practitioners United States. Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee,2010 The DISAM Journal of International Security Assistance Management ,2004 Telemedicine in Low-Resource Settings Richard Wootton,2015-04-24 Telemedicine networks to support healthcare workers in resource limited settings often for humanitarian purposes have evolved over the last decade or so in a largely autonomous way Communication between them has been informal and relatively limited in scope This situation could be improved by developing a comprehensive approach to the collection and dissemination of information A recent review identified seven telemedicine networks each of which had been in operation for at least five years and which provided store and forward telemedicine services to doctors in low and middle income countries These networks provide clinically useful services and improved healthcare access However like much of telemedicine the formal evidence for their cost effectiveness remains weak Topics of current research interest therefore include the cost effectiveness of telemedicine in resource limited settings Outcomes data and methods for gathering it such as patient quality of life following a telemedicine episode the knowledge gain of healthcare staff involved in telemedicine and staff recruitment and retention in rural areas are also of interest Finally there is little published information about the performance of these telemedicine networks and methods for measuring it about how best to manage them and about how to share resources between them A collection of articles reporting the current evidence supporting the use of telemedicine in resource limited settings would build the evidence base and should provide a focus for future research It would also serve to raise the profile of this potentially important research field
