

Activity 3.2 Unit Conversion

Introduction

Engineers of all disciplines are constantly required to work with measurements of a variety of quantities – length, area, volume, mass, force, time, temperature, electric current, etc. It is often necessary to be able to express those measurements in different units. For example, when designing a water distribution piping system, it is important to know how much water pressure is lost as the fluid flows through the pipe. The pressure loss depends on the length of the pipe which is often measured in miles. One formula that is sometimes used to calculate pressure loss requires that the pipe length be input in feet. Therefore, it is necessary to be able to convert miles to feet.

In other situations you may be forced to work between the SI and U S Customary measurement systems. Say, for example, that as a U S company, your product is manufactured and produced based on U S Customary units. However, a European company would like a proposal to incorporate your system into their existing assembly line, the characteristics of which are based on SI units. You must be able to convert between the two systems in order to provide a proposal for a design which includes your company's U S product.

In this activity you will convert measurements among units in both the U S Customary System and the SI system, and you will convert quantities between the two systems of measurement. You will also gain experience with converting units among units that are not specific to one measurement system (such as people and tanks of water) and use the skills you learn to solve everyday problems (such as calculating the cost of gas to travel a given distance).

One Nation Under Taught Vince M. Bertram, Steve Forbes, 2014-11-18 Encourage students to fall in love with learning again by giving them the tools they need to succeed America has been steadily sliding in global education rankings for decades In particular our students are increasingly unable to compete globally in STEM science technology engineering and math fields According to the National Assessment of Education Progress NAEP in 2010 only 26 percent of high school seniors in the U S scored at or above proficient level in math Another 36 percent were failing Only 3 percent scored at an advanced level in math and only 1 percent scored at an advanced level in science The reason for this decline These subjects are often poorly presented or badly taught leading to students K 12 struggling to connect with the content One Nation Under Taught offers a clear solution providing a blueprint for helping students thrive in STEM subjects and giving them the tools needed to succeed and go on for further study in these fields The book challenges our whole way of thinking about education and encourages educators and policy makers at all levels to work together to make our schools places that promote curiosity and inspire a love of learning If we do not change course we will set our students and our country on the path to a lifetime of poverty But if we can implement the reforms Dr Bertram suggests we can achieve long lasting prosperity for our children and our nation as a whole
