Nordic Approaches to Evaluation and Assessment in Early Childhood Education and Care Urban, Mathias, Reikerås, Elin, Eidsvåg, Gunnar Magnus, Guevara, Jennifer, Saegø, Janken, Semmoloni, Carolina, 2022-02-21. Available online: <https://pub.norden.org/temanord2022/512>. Policy makers, educators, and scholars observe with interest how Nordic countries organise services for the education and care of the youngest children. The Nordic model of ECEC has become synonymous with a holistic, children's rights-based approach to pedagogy grounded in democratic values. But as societies keep changing, what exactly characterises the Nordic model today? Given the diversity between and within countries, are there common principles? We investigated the values and principles that underpin the evaluation of early childhood education and care in five Nordic countries: Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway, Sweden. We found that a Nordic approach to evaluation still exists, although it is changing, not least under the influence of wider international developments. An important aspect of the Nordic approach is the central role given to the local and municipal context.
