The End of Days Astrid Nordahl-Erikj, The morning Kira Thorne watched civilization collapse she was standing in line at a coffee shop checking her phone like any other Tuesday The barista was grinding beans with that familiar mechanical whir when every screen in the city went white Not black white A searing impossible brightness that seemed to emanate from within the glass itself Then came the sound It wasn't an explosion or a crash It was silence The kind of absolute quiet that follows lightning stretched thin across minutes instead of seconds Car engines died mid idle Air conditioning units wheezed to a stop Even the barista's grinder fell silent leaving only the whispered prayers of people who suddenly understood that everything they knew had just ended Kira pressed her face to the window and watched the last

plane she would ever see arc across the sky its engines dark falling like a wounded bird toward the distant mountains The pilot was probably already dead they all were anyone who d been flying when the pulse hit EMP someone behind her whispered Electromagnetic pulse Solar flare Nuclear strike The theories buzzed through the crowd like startled insects but Kira knew it didn t matter what had caused it What mattered was what came next Her phone was dead weight in her hand The cash register had gone dark Outside cars sat motionless in the street while their drivers climbed out to stare at engines that would never start again A businessman in a wrinkled suit kept clicking his key fob at his Mercedes as if willpower alone could resurrect the electronics that had governed his life just moments before Kira had grown up on her grandfather s ranch in Montana back when the old man still told stories about the Great Depression and keeping emergency supplies She d thought his paranoia was quaint then all those shelves of canned goods and the well he d insisted on maintaining even after rural water service reached their valley Now she wished she d listened more carefully to his lectures about self reliance

Michael Scantlebury, 2022-09-15 Whenever we hear about the end times or the last days it conjures up all kinds of images in our minds We may think of the universe blowing up with the largest flame imaginable ushering in a new heaven and a new earth We have presupposed in the body of Christ that the righteous will be raptured away before all of this occurs leaving the world to face a massive fire of destruction Upon hearing Christians mention the last days many just assume they re referring to the end of time and the end of the world But the attentive Bible student will ask The last days of what It seems obvious to me that the text is referring to the end of the Old Covenant Temple aeon age When you read the New Testament through this lenses all I can say is Wow It makes a significant
