Felker, 2013-03-28 The Pacific Theater in World War II depended on American sea power This power was refined between 1923 and 1940 when the U S Navy held twenty one major fleet exercises designed to develop strategy and allow officers to enact plans in an operational setting Prior to 1923 naval officers relied heavily on the theories of Capt Alfred Thayer Mahan who argued that sea control was vital to military victory best attained through use of the battleship Fleet exercises however allowed valuable practice with other military resources and theories As a direct result of these exercises the navy incorporated different technologies and updated its own outdated strategies Although World War II brought unforeseen challenges and the disadvantages of simulation exercises quickly became apparent fleet problems may have opened the door to different ideas that allowed the U S Navy ultimately to succeed Testing American Sea Power challenges the conventional wisdom that Mahanian theory held the American Navy in a steel grip Felker's research and analysis the first to concentrate on the navy's interwar exercises will make a valuable contribution to naval history for historians, military professionals and naval instructors

Computerised Test Generation for Cross-National Military Recruitment S.H. Irvine, 2014-03-03 Computerised Test Generation for Cross National Military Recruitment by Prof Sidney H Irvine is a handbook for use in occupational psychology test construction and psychometrics. The book describes the development of the British Army Recruitment Battery BARB by Prof Irvine and his colleagues at the University of Plymouth. BARB is a computer administered selection battery that is still in use to this day and is capable of developing new parallel tests for every candidate in the recruitment process. In telling the story, Sidney Irvine describes not only the development of the battery itself funded by the UK Ministry of Defence but all the work that went on before and afterwards in the United Kingdom with European allies and in the United States. Prof Irvine argues that judicious application of the current state of the art in psychometric selection tests can be used to maximise retention and minimise attrition. As such, this long awaited book will be of great interest to psychologists, psychometricians, test developers, those involved in personnel selection and all with an interest in military history, in particular the history of military science. With a foreword and chapter introductions from a worldwide array of subject matter experts, the book also has a full subject index and an extensive bibliography. I commend it heartily. Professor Jamie Hacker Hughes, CPsychol, CSci, FBP, S. Former Defence Consultant, Advisor in Psychology, Ministry of Defence, United Kingdom.

How Presidents Test Reality John P. Burke, Fred L. Greenstein, 1989-09-19 Just as famines and plagues can provide opportunities for medical research, the unhappy course of United States relations with Vietnam is a prime source of evidence for students of American political institutions. How Presidents Test Reality draws on the record of American decision making about Vietnam to explore the capacity of top government executives and their advisers to engage in effective reality testing. Authors Burke and Greenstein compare the Vietnam decisions of two presidents whose leadership styles and advisory systems diverged as sharply as any in the modern presidency. Faced with a common challenge, an incipient Communist take over of Vietnam, presidents Eisenhower and Johnson engaged in intense debates with their aides and associates, some of whom favored intervention and some of whom opposed it. In the Dien Bien Phu Crisis of 1954, Eisenhower decided not to enter the conflict. In 1965, when it became evident that the regime in South Vietnam could not hold out much longer, Johnson intervened. How Presidents Test Reality uses declassified records and interviews with participants to assess the adequacy of each president's use of advice and information. This important book advances our historical understanding of the American involvement in Vietnam and illuminates the preconditions of effective presidential leadership in the modern world. An exceptionally thoughtful exercise in what contemporary history ought to be. Illuminates the past in a way that suggests how we might deal with the present and the future. John Lewis Gaddis. Burke and Greenstein have written what amounts to an owner's manual for operating the National Security Council. This is a book Reagan's people could have used and George Bush ought to read. Bob Schieffer, The Washington Monthly.
