

The background of the slide features a stylized illustration of a man in a dark hat and coat, seen from the side, looking out over a landscape. The landscape includes rolling hills or mountains under a pale sky, with a body of water in the foreground. The entire scene is overlaid with a faint, light-colored diamond-shaped grid pattern.

Picturing the Past Rosemary Mitchell, 2000-07-13 This monograph is a wide-ranging and sophisticated analysis of representations in text and image of the English past between 1830 and 1870 It consists of a series of inter-related case studies of illustrated history books ranging from editions of David Hume's History of England to W H Ainsworth's The Tower of London 1840 It contributes to present debates on nationalism highlighting the complex and variable nature of cultural constructions of identity Simultaneously it offers an overall interpretation of historiographical change in early and mid-Victorian Britain focusing in particular on the transition from picturesque reconstructions of the English past to the scientific approaches of the professional historian. Genuinely interdisciplinary, Picturing the Past presents new perspectives on traditional studies of Victorian historiography, literature, and illustration. It explores relationships between text and image, author, illustrator, and publisher in the production of illustrated historical texts, often drawing on neglected material in publishers' archives. The tendency to analyse text and image, fiction and non-fiction, popular and elite publications in isolation from each other is challenged in the interests of a more complex and nuanced portrait of the middle-class Victorian historical consciousness.
