planning methodologies urban administration legal frameworks and stakeholder participation in city governance Living With Urban Environmental Health Risks Girma Kebbede,2017-11-28 Although it still has a low urban population when compared with the rest of the world Ethiopia nevertheless has been experiencing one of the most rapid urbanization processes of recent years This rapid urban growth however has not been accompanied by a commensurate increase in basic infrastructure and amenities that are essential for a healthy urban environment Housing water supply sanitation services drainage transport networks and health services have not been able to keep pace with the prevailing urban growth rates resulting in a deterioration of urban living conditions and increasingly serious health problems Living With Urban Environmental Health Risks examines the extent and nature of environmental problems in urban areas in Ethiopia and their impact on health The book points to the economic and political causes that underlie many of the urban problems in the country This in depth analysis suggests ways to deal with these problems at community municipal and national levels

Human and environmental health linkages in Ghana: A case study of Bibiani-Bekwai and Sefwi Wiawso Districts E. Boon,A. Ahenkan,K. A. Domfeh,2008-08-07 Scientific Study from the year 2008 in the subject Environmental Sciences grade B language English abstract Health environment and poverty are closely interrelated and inseparable particularly in developing countries WHO estimates that environmental factors are the root cause of 25% of the total burden of disease worldwide and account for about 35% in sub Saharan Africa SSA Effective environmental management is the key to avoiding a quarter of all preventable illnesses which are directly caused by environmental factors In the Bibiani Bekwai and Sefwi Wiawso Districts of the Western Region of Ghana the environment has been altered by complex human induced factors which have negatively impacted on the health of the population This paper seeks to establish the major causes of environmental and human health degradation and whether there is a direct link between environmental degradation and human health in Bibiani Bekwai and the Sefwi Wiawso Districts in the Western Region of Ghana Four complementary approaches were used during the investigation extensive literature review consultations with key informants the administration of questionnaires and stakeholder consultations The data was analyzed using SPSS to establish the linkages between environmental deterioration and human health in the two districts The results clearly suggest that environmental degradation seriously affects human health in the two districts 80% of the ailments in Bibiani Bekwai and Sefwi Wiawso Districts are attributable to poor environmental health and sanitation and lack of access to good drinking water Never in the history of mankind has greater attention been given to environment and health Agyemang et al 2007 It is estimated that 80 percent of all sickness in the world is attributable to poor environmental factors WHO 2007 Housewright and Mihelcic 2002 Shimkim et al 2005 Environmental related diseases represent an enormous global public health challenge particularly in developing countries and impoverished communities WHO 2007 Shimkim et al 2005 Health and well being of humans cannot be separated from the natural environment Millennium Ecosystem Assessment 2005 WHO 2008 Human health and environmental issues have become a major concern in the world and have received considerable political recognition since the 1970s In its broadest sense environmental health comprises those aspects of human health diseases and injury that are determined or influenced by factors in the environment WHO 1997 Environment, Health and Sustainable Development Emma Hutchinson, Sari Kovats, 2017-02-16 Longstanding evidence of the links between the environment development and human health has led to a recognition of the need for public health policy to address sustainable development in low middle and high income countries One of the great challenges for public health practitioners is to understand and try to modify the relationship between the environment and health This book examines the underlying concepts and history of environmental public health including the key factors Air pollution Chemical contamination Climate hazards Housing and the built environment This book has been fully revised to discuss recent international environmental conventions and legislation in the fast moving world of global environmental health UK and global issues are covered such as urbanization and the impact of transport on air pollution housing and indoor air quality and the impact of environmental change on high and low income countries Understanding Public Health is an innovative series published by Open University Press in collaboration with the London School of Hygiene Tropical Medicine where it is used as a key learning resource for postgraduate programmes It provides self directed learning covering the major issues in public health affecting low middle and high income countries The fully revised second edition presents the wide range of environmental issues that are relevant to public health with academic rigour but loses none of the ease of use for self directed study of the first edition with several new activities and feedback within each chapter Dr Sotiris Vardoulakis Head of Environmental Change Department Public Health England UK The broadening of the traditional scope of environmental health is clearly presented in this book The 19th century view of this branch of public health still prevalent among public health practitioners has finally been updated with a change to a global perspective Energy choices climate change ecosystem services waste are now appropriately included as environmental factors affecting health and through this lens traditional topics of air water and soil can be re interpreted This overview provides a solid foundation for all public health practitioners intending to include environmental health as part of a renewed mainstream public health capable of engaging with the full range of environmental challenges to sustainable health and wellbeing in contemporary societies Giovanni Leonardi Head of the Environmental Epidemiology Group Public Health England UK
