and the geographic position of mitochondrial versus nuclear clines. Nearly all hybrids possess mitochondrial DNA from one parental type, klauberi, suggesting isolation is asymmetrical. Selection against hybrids is inferred to be strong (2–1%), but whether this selection is endogenous (genetically based) or exogenous (environmentally based) remains to be tested. In Chapter 2, I investigated the role of late Quaternary climate change on phylogeographic patterns within the Large blotched Ensatina Ensatina eschscholtzii klauberi. Intersecting species distribution models constructed under current climatic conditions as well as two different historical time periods (Last Glacial Maximum 21 ka and mid Holocene 6 ka) predicted stable refugial areas where the species may have persisted throughout climatic fluctuations. Significant phylogeographic structure exists, but geographic structuring of genetic variation by refugia was not supported. Results suggest that populations in putative refugia have not been isolated for very long or that gene flow may have masked any earlier periods of divergence in allopatry. In Chapter 3, I conducted a multilocus phylogeographic analysis of the entire Ensatina eschscholtzii complex to reexamine previous phylogenetic hypotheses based on mitochondrial DNA alone. A concatenation approach was used in addition to newer methods that model the relationship between the species tree and the gene trees embedded within them. The concatenated tree was similar to previous mitochondrial trees, identifying well-supported coastal and inland clades and recovering oregonensis and platensis as paraphyletic. The concatenated tree was not well resolved at the base. Basal relationships recovered by the species tree were well resolved, but most relationships were not well supported compared to the concatenated tree. Results are generally consistent with previous efforts based on mtDNA but provide further resolution to the Ensatina phylogeny while highlighting the difficult nature of inferring species trees from samples of closely related populations that are experiencing gene flow.

Speciation, Phylogeography, and Gene Flow in Giant Salamanders (Dicamptodon). Craig A. Steele, 2006. Giant salamanders of the genus Dicamptodon occur in the Pacific Northwest of North America. The variety of geographic distributions and life history traits displayed among this genus provide opportunities to test hypotheses concerning regional biogeography, effects of Pleistocene glaciation, comparative phylogeography, and patterns of gene flow. A genus-level phylogeny was constructed to test competing biogeographic hypotheses concerning the disjunct distribution of the Idaho giant salamander D. aterrimus and a Pleistocene speciation hypothesis for the Cope's giant salamander D. copei. Results indicate speciation and distribution of D. aterrimus is attributable to the orogeny of the Cascade Mountains rather than recent inland dispersal, and that D. copei is distantly related to other coastal species and likely originated much earlier than the Pleistocene. Patterns of intraspecific variation were examined for the widespread Pacific giant salamander D. tenebrosus, and hypotheses concerning the location and number of Pleistocene refugia were tested. Results indicate that D. tenebrosus was restricted to two Pleistocene refugia: one in the Columbia River valley and another in the Klamath-Siskiyou Mountains, and has recently expanded northward from these refugia into its current distribution. Phylogeographic patterns for D. copei were compared to that of the codistributed Van Dyke's salamander Plethodon vandykei.

Results reveal that sympatric populations displayed identical phylogeographic topologies suggesting shared evolutionary histories but topologies were ultimately incongruent due to several highly divergent allopatric populations of D. copei. Comparative patterns of genetic population structure were examined for sympatric populations of D. tenebrosus and D. copei. Results indicate that the metamorphosing species D. tenebrosus displayed a lack of population structure while the non-metamorphosing species D. copei displayed a larger degree of population structure. These results help explain the phylogeographic patterns presented for each species. The large distribution and post-glacial expansion by D. tenebrosus was facilitated by its high dispersal ability while the low dispersal ability of D. copei led to a small and fragmented geographic range and greater phylogeographic structure within its range. These results suggest that understanding life history variation on a local scale can lead to a better understanding of the mechanistic underpinnings of species distributions in general.
