The China Directory for ... Annual Publication ,1863 Spanish America R.H Bonnycastle,2020-08-03 Reproduction of the original Spanish America by R H Bonnycastle Costume and History in Highland Ecuador Ann Pollard Rowe,Lynn A. Meisch,2012-10-03 The traditional costumes worn by people in the Andes women s woolen skirts men s ponchos woven belts and white felt hats instantly identify them as natives of the region and serve as revealing markers of ethnicity social class gender age and so on Because costume expresses so much scholars study it to learn how the indigenous people of the Andes have identified themselves over time as well as how others have identified and influenced them Costume and History in Highland Ecuador assembles for the first time for any Andean country the evidence for indigenous costume from the entire chronological range of prehistory and history The contributors glean a remarkable amount of information from pre Hispanic ceramics and textile tools archaeological textiles from the Inca empire in Peru written accounts from the colonial period nineteenth century European style pictorial representations and twentieth century textiles in museum collections Their findings reveal that several garments introduced by the Incas including men s tunics and women s wrapped dresses shawls and belts had a remarkable longevity They also demonstrate that the hybrid poncho from Chile and the rebozo from Mexico diffused in South America during the colonial period and that the development of the rebozo in particular was more interesting and complex than has previously been suggested The adoption of Spanish garments such as the pollera skirt and man s shirt were also less straightforward and of more recent vintage than might be expected Spanish America Vol.2 (of 2) Richard Henry Bonnycastle, In this enlightened age Geography has assumed a form so new and interesting that it has become the study as well as the amusement of all ranks of society the philosopher peruses with admiring attention the details of the localities of distant climes and the mere reader instructs as well as amuses himself in turning over the pages of a geographical performance This science which till very lately bore so low a rank in the scale of intellectual attainment has arisen by the exertions of men of genius and the increasing commerce of the Atlantic states of Europe to a proud elevation amid the numerous objects of scientific research in fact it blends itself so minutely with almost all of them that in order to acquire a thorough knowledge of it it is necessary to study the whole circle of the arts and sciences Philosophy enables the geographic traveller to account for the ever varying appearances of nature which meet his wondering sight Mathematical knowledge gives him the means of calculating with accuracy the positions and forms of the places which arrest his attention in his progress and with his apparatus of Astronomical instruments whether he be in distant Inde on the snow capped summits of the Cordillera of the Andes or in the frozen regions of the north he is still able to fix the exact route which he intends to follow Painting or rather its twin sister Drawing is also an acquirement absolutely necessary for the man of research in this science as by its assistance he can point out to his brethren the surprising features of those distant regions which it is their lot to hear of but never to see and by this delightful art which may well be ranked among the first of gifts to man he can bring home to the imagination the forms of things unknown Poetry is not without its share in assisting to give just notions of geographic details as by its fascinating aid the ideas which we form of distant objects are heightened and impressed on our memories and without the fellowship of History Geography would prove the most uninteresting of studies But there are other branches of philosophy which have of late given a form and stability to the pursuit of knowledge in this science and by whose powerful co operation the march of geographical acquisition is daily spreading over a wider and more noble field Chemistry has within the last century assumed a character so widely different from its ancient bounds that the world is as it were a new region We have become acquainted with phenomena which were not before imagined to exist and we can trace the causes and consequently the effects of many of the operations of nature which had hitherto baffled all the efforts of man Geology Mineralogy and Oryctology have also as a consequence of the advanced state of chemical knowledge become so universally studied that no modern writer of travels ought to be unacquainted with at least their leading principles and to render his labours very acceptable to the public he should possess an accurate and extended knowledge of these branches of science Zoography has a close connection with the details of Modern Geography as without a description of the properties and forms of the various races of animals which all bounteous Providence has placed on the Earth for the sustenance or the use of man a mere outline of the features of kingdoms and states would be though not useless yet uninteresting Botany also takes an active part in the formation of works of this nature and perhaps no other science has a more pleasing share in such undertakings for every day and almost every hour discloses to the phytologist some new and singular variety of Nature s performance To be continue in this ebook
