QUESTION 1: COMPREHENSION

- In 2011, poachers in South Africa killed 16 endangered African elephants before they were killed in anti-poaching. And poachers for several years later. Last year, 1,318 rhinos were killed for their horns, which are usually harvested while the animal is still alive.
- Conservation groups protect the rhinos (kill rhinos) of the first time that Poaching Intelligence Service (PIS) is present poaching.
- The PIS tracking system is combined with a laser eye scanner and other sensors. If a poacher enters an animal's area with a GPS, the device starts police and sends images of the poacher.
- "We just don't know where or when poachers might strike," said Steve Perley, National Director for the Eastern Cape Wildlife and Tourism Agency. South Africa. "In effectively protect these rare landscapes requires an army." And even then, poachers could find a way through. "They are well equipped and organized, and they will find you in any habitat because the reward is so high."
- PIS tracks and sends data to anti-poaching police. In fact, it's designed to be a warning system for poachers. says, "The best monitor in the landscape is the alert the animal itself can hear or feel. The rhino senses vibrations when you're in its space. It has a warning call. The PIS captures the location... captures you as the animal is following or track within minutes, leaving no doubt as to how to harvest the valuable animal in its corner."
- In 2011, it was said. Poachers recently completed (kill rhinos) with the device, allowing them to capture more poachers from the rhino's eyes. In 2011, the device they used had not been used with rhinos. They hope to expand the program to include elephants and tigers, with a fully functional system with operational in early or next year.
- With just the one monthly killing in Zimbabwe, the plight of endangered rhinos is in the public eye more than ever. Poachers who are driven by PIS to be implemented.
- Steve Perley, National Director, says, "The law has to be enforced and the Poacher PIS can do it. The only thing lacking for rhinos was the real South's poaching trail."
