

Giving an Introduction Speech

When we think about making academic presentations, we probably don't think about making introductions. However, introductions are a part of many academic situations. For example, we may introduce a new member of our department to other members. Similarly, at a national meeting or conference we often informally introduce one colleague to another. We may also find ourselves making introductions in more formal contexts, such as presenting the members of a panel discussion or introducing a speaker at a guest lecture, seminar, or conference.

We may also have to introduce ourselves. For example, we may visit advisors, professors, or mentors to share relevant background information about ourselves. Or, in a more formal setting, we might be expected to provide information about ourselves as proof of our expertise, such as when presenting a conference talk or interviewing for a research or teaching assistant (graduate student instructor) position. In this unit, you will make a presentation in which you introduce one of your classmates to the rest of the class.

Before preparing any academic speech, it is important to consider

- ☐ audience
- ☐ purpose
- ☐ organization

this volume offers will help turn around the fear that many people have of public speaking and at the same time provide a step by step guide to successful speech making The author has extensive experience as a teacher of public speaking and with her clear guidelines and logical sequence of chapters no area is left uncovered Each chapter explains the process illustrates it with examples and provides skill building exercises Dynamics of Speech Production and Perception P.L. Greenberg, G. Meyer, 2006-09-20 The idea that speech is a dynamic process is a tautology whether from the standpoint of the talker the listener or the engineer speech is an action a sound or a signal continuously changing in time Yet because phonetics and speech science are offspring of classical phonology speech has been viewed as a sequence of discrete events positions of the articulatory apparatus waveform segments and phonemes Although this perspective has been mockingly referred to as beads on a string from the time of Henry Sweet's 19th century treatise almost up to our days specialists of speech science and speech technology have continued to conceptualize the speech signal as a sequence of static states interleaved with transitional elements reflecting the quasi continuous nature of vocal production This book a collection of papers of which each looks at speech as a dynamic process and highlights one of its particularities is dedicated to the memory of Ludmilla Andreevna Chistovich At the outset it was planned to be a Chistovich festschrift but sadly she passed away a few months before the book went to press The 24 chapters of this volume testify to the enormous influence that she and her colleagues have had over the four decades since the publication of their 1965 monograph
