

ESSAY ON DEMOCRACY

DEMOCRACY IN PAKISTAN

World War II inaugurated the vistas of democracy in the world. The genesis of Pakistan as an independent state was marked with the same trends. However, the booming democratic state as envisaged by the Quaid soon fell into the hands of demagogues, feudals, elitist bureaucracy, under the aegis of the corrupt interest groups, all sorts of mafia and the invisible foreign hands. Above all the military and the quasi-military rule strangled any hope of democracy for the developing Pakistan. The deterioration got further impetus by the foul play in the elections, stagnation of the political process by coup d' tats followed by the martial laws, sometimes in the name of Islam and other times in the name of modernism. The fault lines of democracy widened with the caricature of the constitution, corruption of the judiciary and violation of the human rights.

The seeds of anti-democratic norms were sown , when on August 1947, Khan Sahib's ministry was dismissed along with M.A Khusroo's dismissal on April 20,1948 in Sindh and Fazal-ul-Haq's in 1954 in East Pakistan, despite the fact that each government enjoyed a majority in the assemblies. However, the major blow to the democratic process was the baffling re-shuffling of the minister ship thrice in a fortnight. Yet the gravest of all was the abrogation of the constitution for the first time on October 1958 by Iskander Mirza.

The rough path of pseudo democracy brought a series of catastrophic incidents in the attire of AyubKhan's failed federal-provincial policies, Zia's grappling with the religion, Bhutto's demagogic rhetoric, Benazir's conceited false claims and Nawaz Sharif's cowardice. The path was further furnished by the sham democratic claims in the form of a uniformed unconstitutional president turning the whole nation topsy turvy to establish an illusionary democracy.

The mockery of democracy could also be observed by the fact that the so called loyal, jingoistic politicians could not form a constitution for the first nine pivotal years of independence. The objective resolution of 1949 , the constitution of 1956 and 1962 , that tried to save the sinking political raft of dictatorship and martial law ended up in the separation of Bangladesh. The gift of Bhutto to Pakistan in the form of 1973 constitution was a child's play in the hands of the dictators, the 8th amendment LFO, the seventeenth amendment crumbled down any democratic signs that were left with country. The successful democratic countries like England and U.S live with the principle of separation of powers, elucidated in their constitution and protected by judiciary. On the contrary, Pakistan leaders devour every thing and any thing that they can lay their hands on and have likewise, changed the constitution to suit their autocratic, plutocratic whims in such a way that the constitution has been reduced to a legitimate protective covering for the illegitimate processes.
