

Should School Uniforms be Compulsory

9 pages | 2106 words

When standing in the middle of a suburban high school, often the first things individuals notice are faces first and clothes second. It's not necessarily the clothes the students are wearing, but how they wear them. With a wide range in fashion, ranging from high-waist skinny jeans to rompers; from simple Converse, to elegant high heels. At times, it can be overwhelming to enforce students to abide by the dress code. When in theory, it would be much simpler to require all students wear the same thing. However, what students wear is part of who they are; it's the way they express their individualism. The debate of mandating school uniforms is a hot topic being argued all around the nation. Some schools claim that enforcing school uniforms decrease violence, reduce peer pressure, increase school performance, and enforce discipline. While others, claim that uniforms are a violation of our First Amendment rights. However, at the end of the day, school uniforms do not serve the purpose they were created to serve and should not be required. Supporters of school uniforms believe there are many reasons to school uniforms should be enforced. For example, Julie Underwood who believes school uniforms serve many benefits writes that school uniforms "decrease violence and theft; prevent gang members from wearing gang colors and insignia at school; instilling students with discipline; help parents and student resist peer pressure; and helping school officials recognize nonstudents" (Underwood, 2018). There are also more recent claims that school uniforms promote an increase in academic performance. A bulletin published by the National Association of Secondary School Principals, Peter Caruso says, "students who attend schools who attend schools with a uniform policy attend more frequently, and when in school concentrate on their education rather than their social arrangements. As a result, their academic performance increases as well" (Caruso, 1996). School uniforms are believed to neutralize students which forces them to focus more on their school work rather than being focused and consumed by other outside social factors. Also, Caruso claims how school uniforms decrease violence and removes gang activity. He says, "Some students view school as an area within which to display the latest fashions, and students have been killed or gravely injured by other students who covet what they are wearing" (Caruso, 1996). There's this unconscious competition over appearance that can cause violence between students. There's a wide range of students and some families can afford the latest fashions while others aren't as fortunate. In some areas, gangs are very prominent in which gang members wear certain colors, logos, or articles of clothing. Which can cause disturbances within schools. Caruso discusses how school uniforms takes care of these issues. However, there are many non-supporters that don't believe that school uniforms should be required. A huge reason being is that by requiring school uniforms is an infringement of students First Amendment rights. The First Amendment of the US Constitution guarantees that all individuals have the right to express themselves freely. In the 1970 case Richards v. Thurston, which was a case about a seventeen-year-old boy who refused to cut his hair shorter. The...
