ABANDONED IN BERLIN John R. Cammidge, 2018-09-05 Abandoned in Berlin invites the reader to decide if anti-Semitism in Germany ended after the war or was simply concealed by a new set of West German laws The story uncovers the history of a prestigious block of Jewish owned apartments in West Berlin expropriated under National Socialism at the end of March 1936 The leading characters are a widow and her two teenage daughters with the story narrated in the third person by Hilda the only child of the youngest daughter who currently lives in Novato northern California Uncovering the family history begins during June 2016 when Hilda visits Berlin to discover the home where her mother lived as a child and teenager Through diligent research and the help of people and organizations in Berlin Britain the United States and Israel a story of persecution discrimination courage and survival emerges Important events are exposed that begin in December 1929 when the father of the family dies suddenly of natural causes and leaves his wife to bring up the two adolescent daughters and manage the apartment business in the Charlottenburg Wilmersdorf district of Berlin The youngest girl legally inherits a share of the property but because she is under age 21 and has no father she is placed under the care of a Nazi Guardianship Court during late 1933 As a consequence the Court controls all financial matters affecting the property Slowly its requirements squeeze Hilda's family out of their home and rental business and then out of Germany Not until during the early 1950's can the survivors pursue restitution under newly created West German jurisprudence What happens at this time is described in Abandoned in Berlin
