Technology Tokyo Japan Numerical simulation is now a need in many fields of science technology and industry The complexity of the simulated systems coupled with the massive use of data makes HPC essential to move towards predictive simulations Advances in computer architecture have so far permitted scientific advances but at the cost of continually adapting algorithms and applications The next technological breakthroughs force us to rethink the applications by taking energy consumption into account These profound modifications require not only anticipation and sharing but also a paradigm shift in application design to ensure the sustainability of developments by guaranteeing a certain independence of the applications to the profound modifications of the architectures it is the passage from optimal performance to the portability of performance It is the challenge of this book to demonstrate by example the approach that one can adopt for the development of applications offering performance portability in spite of the profound changes of the computing architectures

Christophe Calvin CEA Fundamental Research Division Saclay France Three editors one from each of the High Performance Computer Centers at Lawrence Berkeley Argonne and Oak Ridge National Laboratories have compiled a very useful set of chapters aimed at describing software developments for the next generation exa scale computers Such a book is needed for scientists and engineers to see where the field is going and how they will be able to exploit such architectures for their own work The book will also benefit students as it provides insights into how to develop software for such computer architectures Overall this book fills an important need in showing how to design and implement algorithms for exa scale architectures which are heterogeneous and have unique memory systems The book discusses issues with developing user codes for these architectures and how to address these issues including actual coding examples
