Document 2: Informational Passage

In the early 1500s, Copernicus served in a variety of roles for the Catholic Church, where he developed economic theories and legislation. Astronomy became the more than a hobby for Copernicus, a career without professional title. By 1514, however, Copernicus became so convinced of the theory of a heliocentric (sun-centered) solar system that he began to share his notes with friends. Not long after an Italian astronomer gave a lecture about the sun's position, Copernicus published his theory. The book was finally published in 1543, the year Copernicus died. In the book, Copernicus explained that the sun was at the center of the universe, and the planets (Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn) orbited it. He also argued that the distance to the sun was much less than the distance from the sun to the stars. Copernicus died a year later, in 1543.
