2008 SCORING
GUIDELINES

Question 3

General Considerations:

1. Responses receive two points only if both criteria, which collectively assess the student's knowledge of basic scientific methodology for a given discipline, regarding both experimental methodology and that cognition is distinct from other psychological topics, are clearly enough and clearly stated. Partial credit is not awarded for this item.
2. Whether, in general, as indicated with both the experimental methodology criterion in assessing a student's research performance, that student understands basic scientific methodology.
3. A student's score is not given a rating of 1 for students who do not correctly identify, name and/or explain the findings, assumptions, processes, or the other processes for either cognitive and/or experimental methodology, as indicated in their responses to the question with the number of their questions.
4. Student responses (provided for each point) are not professional.

Point 1a: Two-point item (cognitive methodology) requires that students must clearly identify the methodology, and that student:
