- These people are not so. In fact, they have been recognized since in August 1976, by a group of scientists from the University of California, San Diego, who have been studying the effects of the 1976 earthquake on the San Andreas fault. They have found that the fault is still active and that the earthquake was not a simple slip on the fault, but a complex event involving the entire fault system. The earthquake was a result of the fault's long history of movement, and it is likely that it will continue to move in the future.
