Change? What Change? Geoffrey Hackett,2011 I am always surprised by the number of knowledgeable and dynamic people who when they earnestly desire that things should be different throw themselves enthusiastically and with renewed vigor into doing more of the things they ve done before When you get down to talking with them this is nearly always based on the fact that they are so fearful of the uncertainties of change that rather than plan or learn to manage change which commonsense would dictate to be the solution to their needs they would far rather endure even more of that which they are seeking to alter Why the fear Often because people will not communicate or share their ideas in case they are dismissed I am always impressed that the majority of significant changes and especially those that have endured the test of time did not explode onto the scene were not monumental events were not the creations of super humans but the ideas of normal everyday thinkers and creators ordinary people who wanted to influence change whose concepts took years to come to light and often lifetimes to be recognized or used to their full potential Sedimentary

Basins Gerhard Einsele, 2013-06-29 The modern geological sciences are characterized by extraordinarily rapid progress as well as by the development and application of numerous new and refined methods most of them handling an enormous amount of data available from all the continents and oceans Given this state of affairs it seems inevitable that many students and professionals tend to become experts in relatively narrow fields and thereby are in danger of losing a broad view of current knowledge The abundance of new books and symposium volumes testifies to this trend toward specialization However many geologic processes are complex and result from the interaction of many seemingly unrelated individual factors This signifies that we still need generalists who have the broad overview and are able to evaluate the great variety of factors and processes controlling a geologic system such as a sedimentary basin In addition this also means that cooperation with other disciplines in the natural sciences and engineering is increasingly important Modern textbooks providing this broad overview of the earth sciences are rare OECD Skills Studies Skills Matter Further Results from the Survey of Adult Skills OECD, 2016-06-28 In the wake of the technological revolution that began in the last decades of the 20th century labour market demand for information processing and other high level cognitive and interpersonal skills is growing substantially
