

Thinking About the Story:

7. In Chapter 10, with the voyage just underway and the true character of the crew still unknown, how does Stevenson use the sea shanty, “Fifteen men on the dead man’s chest,” as a type of foreshadowing?
8. After Jim tells the doctor, squire, and captain what he’s heard in the apple barrel, whom does the doctor say can help them more than anyone? Why? What is Jim’s reaction?
9. Pace is the rhythm of a story or the speed of the action in a story. The pace of a story varies depending on the story structure. For example, the climax of an adventure narrative will unfold at a brisk pace. The writer deliberately creates this pace with short, punchy sentences built on strong, transitional verbs. In general, pace is a complex mix of word choice; length of sentences, paragraphs and sections; transitions; and structure and sequencing.
A transition is a passage in a piece of writing that smoothly connects two topics or sections to each other. How does Stevenson use Jim’s time in the apple barrel and the sighting of the island to transition and increase the tension and pace?
10. In literature, the term stereotype refers to a character with exaggerated characteristics intended to represent all members of his or her group. A stereotype is a widely believed but unchanging and oversimplified image or idea of a particular type of person or thing. How is the stereotypical pirate portrayed in common culture? Choose one or two quotes from Chapters 7–12 to show what Long John Silver is like. Is he stereotypical? Why or why not?
