Triantafyllidis,2015-06-11 The book provides suitable methods for the simulations of boundary value problems of geotechnical installation processes with reliable prediction for the deformation behavior of structures in static or dynamic interaction with the soil It summarizes the basic research of a research group from scientists dealing with constitutive relations of soils and their implementations as well as contact element formulations in FE codes Numerical and physical experiments are presented providing benchmarks for future developments in this field Boundary value problems have been formulated and solved with the developed tools in order to show the effectivity of the methods Parametric studies of geotechnical installation processes in order to identify the governing parameters for the optimization of the process are given in such a way that the findings can be recommended to practice for further use For many design engineers in practice the assessment of the serviceability of nearby structures due to geotechnical installation processes is a very challenging task Some hints about possible effects and their consideration are given in this book which may provide a help for such estimations which are still not possible to be given in a satisfactory manner Soil Behavior Around Laterally Loaded Piles H. L. Gill,1968 Field tests were performed to study the horizontal load displacement characteristics of natural soil deposits and to associate these characteristics with the behavior of laterally loaded piles. The ultimate objective of the tests was to acquire information essential for the design of laterally loaded soil supported structures. Three soil conditions were considered: 1) bay mud with a desiccated crust in its natural dry state; 2) bay mud submerged within the area of testing; and 3) a hydraulic fill of granular material classified as SP by the unified soil classification system. Segmental pile tests were performed with three sizes of laterally loaded segments and at various depths below ground surface in the bay mud. Similar tests in the hydraulic fill were covered in a previous NCEL report. Lateral load tests on full scale piles from 4 to 16 inches in diameter were performed at each test site. Theoretical information available, soil data, and results of the segmental pile tests were compared and combined to establish representative lateral load displacement relationships for the soil at any depth at the three sites by using rectangular hyperbolas. Theoretical predictions of the response of laterally loaded piles were made using these relationships and the results were compared with data obtained during the lateral load tests on piles. Experimental data and theoretical predictions compared favorably. Author
