Selling Hope and College Alex Posecznick, 2017-04-25 It has long been assumed that college admission should be a simple matter of sorting students according to merit with the best heading off to the Ivy League and highly ranked liberal arts colleges and the rest falling naturally into their rightful places. Admission to selective institutions where extremely fine distinctions are made is characterized by heated public debates about whether standardized exams, high school transcripts, essays, recommendation letters, or interviews best indicate which prospective students are worthy. And then there is college for everyone else. But what goes into less selective college admissions in an era when everyone feels compelled to go regardless of preparation or life goals? Ravenwood College, where Alex Posecznick spent a year doing ethnographic research, was a small private nonprofit institution dedicated to social justice and serving traditionally underprepared students from underrepresented minority groups. To survive in the higher education marketplace, the college had to operate like a business and negotiate complex categories of merit while painting a hopeful picture of the future for its applicants. Selling Hope and College is a snapshot of a particular type of institution as it goes about the business of producing itself and justifying its place in the market. Admissions staff members were burdened by low enrollments and worked tirelessly to fill empty seats even as they held on to the institution's special spirit. Posecznick documents what it takes to keep a mediocre institution open and running and the struggles, tensions, and battles that members of the community tangle with daily as they carefully walk the line between empowering marginalized students and exploiting them. Broke Jodie Adams Kirshner, 2019-11-19 Essential in showcasing people who are persistent, clever, flawed, loving, struggling, and full of contradictions. Broke affirms why it is
