Dear Clinical Quality Award Committee members,

We are honored to be considered for this award. In response to the fact that many (more than 20%) of patients with diabetes in General Internal Medicine (GIM) are in poor control (with hemoglobin A1Cs of greater than 9), we decided to form an interdisciplinary quality team to address this problem. This team includes a representative from the call center (Alexia Rojas), pharmacy (Megan Bergstrom), nursing (Carmen Teso), physicians (Drs. Lasser and Siegel), and our endocrine colleagues who practice in GIM (James Rosenzweig (physician), Roberta Capelson (nurse practitioner), and Daniel O'Shea (patient navigator)). We also invited colleagues from social work, behavioral medicine, and a medical assistant to join in our discussions. While we have recently received recognition as a level I patient-centered medical home (PCMH), many of us felt that we were really only a PCMH "on paper." We were not delivering team-based care and performing true population-based management. Rather, we were waiting for patients to come in for individual visits. If patients missed a visit, we waited until they next sought care to address their diabetes.

In the fall of 2012, we embarked upon a series of planning meetings, facilitated by Jim Danielson, a process improvement specialist. We attempted to map our current processes of diabetes care beyond individual provider visits, and concluded that no such processes of care existed. We therefore created a whole new process of care. We examined each team member's current role in caring for diabetic patients and redesigned their role so that they would be working "at the top of their license," e.g. using their most advanced skills in their work. We then worked with our colleagues in IT to develop a report for each primary care provider of patients with poorly controlled diabetes. We then piloted team meetings to discuss patients of Drs. Lasser and Siegel. At each meeting, the PCP gave a brief description of the patient and identified barriers to optimal diabetes control (e.g. mental health or substance abuse problems, transportation issues, difficulty affording medication copayments), and the group brainstormed solutions. Different members of the care team then took on tasks that they would complete between team meetings. For example, Alexia (from the call center) would call patients who were missing appointments to understand why this was the case. She would also schedule appointments for the patient to see a dietician, pharmacist, social worker, or psychologist as appropriate. Finally, she would arrange for patients to have pre-visit labs. Carmen (the nurse) would deliver intensive one on one education for patients with low literacy who were struggling to control their diabetes. During the meetings, Roberta Capelson, Dr. Rosenzweig and Megan Bergstrom would provide expert advice on how to intensify medication therapy.

This project has resulted in a significant decrease in mean hemoglobin A1C among Dr. Lasser and Siegel's patients (nearly 1 point), relative to control group PCPs. There are several reasons why our quality improvement effort has been successful. First, we implemented the intervention using a "bottom-up" approach. We believe that engaging front line practice staff in the design of quality improvement interventions is much more effective than a "top down" approach in which clinical leaders implement changes without seeking input from staff. In addition, we believe that seeking input from all team members can result in improved care. Many of our team members come from the same communities as our patients, and thus were able to provide insights into barriers patients may face. A second reason why our efforts have been successful is that we sought to address the social determinants of health that prevent our patients from achieving better Community Leadership in Maryland, 1790-1840 Whitman H. Ridgway, 2018-07-11 American democracy has fascinated generations of historians They have probed its philosophical foundations and the structure of its institutions but their studies reveal little about those who really wielded power in the formative years of the republic Employing a sophisticated research design Whitman Ridgway examines the changing leadership patterns in four diverse communities in Maryland from 1790 to 1840 The results indicate clearly the need to study the American democratic process at the local level Ridgway selected Baltimore City Frederick St Marys and Talbot counties representing the underlying economic and cultural diversity of one political culture Maryland to evaluate who governed how these patterns differed from one community to another and how such patterns changed over time The research design defines the scope of the study Ridgway uses the decisional method of analysis determining who actually made decisions in order to identify the political leaders His extensive research in manuscript and newspaper collections tax and census data and religious and geneological records gathered information on some 1 300 persons This study of community power illuminates facets of a democratic society which perplexed Alexis de Tocqueville over a century ago Ridgway demonstrates that despite the expansion of popular participation in political affairs the influence of the wealthy continued to be significant He shows also how leaders without benefit of wealth or social ties to the oligarchies were able to enter community decision making In a more modern context this important book adds to the literature in several ways Its greatest contribution is methodological no longer can historians talk about power relationships without studying them directly The work also compares two important periods the first and second party eras normally treated in isolation and through this comparison it reveals much about democracy egalitarianism and power Originally published 1979 A UNC Press Enduring Edition UNC Press Enduring Editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print These editions are published unaltered from the original and are presented in affordable paperback formats bringing readers both historical and cultural value     Multisite Evaluation Practice: Lessons and Reflections From Four Cases Frances reflect real people and real issues and though each person or incident is unique the broader implications for society in general bubble to the surface throughout the book This is not an in depth study of homophobia ethnicity politics or philosophy but those are among the broad issues that emerge throughout the book often with their own chapter headings but not exclusive to those chapters This is a personal story not the result of research or planning I live on campus at a boarding day school of teenagers in grades 9 12 with an additional day population in the 7th and 8th grades that has a separate administrator Even though only a small portion of the American population has contact with or knowledge of these institutions what I have to say has broad enough implications that there will be useful nuggets for many people parents students school personnel former students Much of what I do say is anecdotal personal I am not a social scientist I do not have the broad data to make solid conclusions about education or parenting I am a student of history a teacher of history however I am not an historian I have no PH D I have taught US History including the Advanced Placement class European History Ancient History Geography American Government electives on Hitler and Nazi Germany for nearly 30 years Russian History and more recently Western Philosophy I have taught 7th through 12th graders although only juniors and seniors with a smattering of sophomores for the last ten years I have coached soccer basketball golf and baseball I have lived in boys dorms a girls dorm in my own mortgaged house and in school housing I have taken school trips to Outward Bound programs Germany and the USSR In short I have some experience and some experiences After 33 years as a teacher 9 as a Dean of Students I am on a bit of a break I have a sabbatical during the 2nd half of the 2001 02 year and it is the first year after 32 consecutive years in the classroom that I am not teaching I decided that I would discipline myself to try to write enough for a book during my sabbatical I have been in schools for more than 50 consecutive years Most of what I have to say is about the last ten and where all of us are right now While the job of being a Dean of Students is indeed a serious one the ability to remain personally stable and successful requires empathy patience and certainly a sense of humor While there are no rollicking escapades described in the book there are indeed some amusing although sometimes poignant moments as well The author attempts to demonstrate his personal style as a Dean with that hint of humor as he goes along Dean is a four letter word While it is not always clear what the term means my title at the school is Dean of Students We also have a Dean of Faculty and an Academic Dean One of the earliest definitions of Dean was a senior member of a monastery overseeing ten monks Fortunately that does not apply to me It is also a definition of a senior member of a male group female version doyen It is in my case a side effect of constancy with one employer As Dean of Students I am essentially in charge of discipline another of those elements of the definition of Dean Dean of Discipline Dean of Dress Dean of Issues Other People Want to Avoid That sounds too much like a march to martyrdom and martyrdom is not
