

REFLECTION PAPER ABOUT MY INTERSHIP JOURNEY

I'm uncertain where to begin, but possibly with my introduction to teaching a Grade 3 class with garments focus. The experience was a mixture of delight, thrill, and apprehension, primarily because the COVID-19 pandemic necessitated a shift in our social norms, and I witnessed numerous individuals flouting the one-meter physical distancing protocol. I have a two-hour class scheduled from 9:45 to 11:45 in the morning with Grade 3 students, during which I will conduct a discussion and then move on to conducting laboratory work. The sum total of these numbers is 48 and they hold significant importance. Despite the early hour, I am immensely fatigued and could easily drift off to sleep following this interval. Back in the day, I came to understand how dissimilar these children were to us. I encountered a significant challenge when I discovered that the female students were not excelling, which was an uncommon occurrence during my era. Although I had the option of releasing it, I chose not to, as I am convinced that pupils require external incentives. Subsequently, I resolved to generate commendation vouchers that acknowledge individuals for their outstanding effort, regardless of the incomplete status of their assignment, as long as they are making progress towards achieving it. Within two hours of offering my reward tickets, I observe my students being driven to complete tasks with great enthusiasm.

B. However, from that point forward, I am forced to confront actuality. Teaching has presented me with a highly demanding task. Despite having 35 battles to conquer, their diversified personalities, cultures, beliefs and upbringings often leave me feeling disillusioned and unwilling to continue as a teacher. The following day, I strategized on handling the management of my classroom. My fellow student teachers inquire about the reason behind our boisterousness and merthful behavior during our afternoon gatherings, and on occasions when we are not laughing, we engage in singing. I am aware that they perceived me to be insane, and I derive pleasure from such a label. I started to understand my students, how they learn and what motivate them to learn. But my approach for them is not just based on my perspective as some experts claim that children who don't have enough play will less likely to learn. I enjoyed testing what I learned from books such as what John Dewey believe that learning is by doing. In my Grade 3 class where we have laboratory works, I strictly don't allow any students to teach their
