

Imagine an agent in the city of Arad, Romania, enjoying a touring holiday. The agent's performance measure contains many factors: it wants to improve its suntan, improve its Romanian, take in the sights, enjoy the nightlife (as much as it is), avoid hangovers, and so on. The decision problem is a complex one involving many tradeoffs and careful reading of guidebooks. Now, suppose the agent has decided to fly out of Bucharest the following day. In that case, the agent's goal is to find a route from Arad to Bucharest. Courses of action are evaluated in terms of the number of cities visited, and the agent's performance is improved by limiting the number of cities visited. ly those states in which the agent is in the future, so that it can decide on its next action. For example, if we were to consider actions at the level of "turning the steering wheel one degree left," we would have to consider a lot, let alone to Bucharest, the world and there would be a great deal of detail later. For now, let us assume that the agent is moving from one major town to another.
