

Which of the following are examples of "permanent products" that can be used to collect data using permanent product recording procedures. - ANS IS Number of broken windows and folded shirts

True/False: permanent product recording is one of the least cumbersome data recording methods - ANS IS True

Choose the best operational definition for a tantrum - ANS IS Any instance of the client crying and hitting himself in the head with a closed fist which makes a sound that can be heard within five feet. Instance must last longer than 30 seconds and are separated by 30 seconds of non-occurrence.

Define behavior: - ANS IS The activity of living organisms; human behavior includes everything that people do.

define environment: - ANS IS the conglomerate of real circumstances in which the organism or references part of the organism exists; behavior cannot occur in the absence of environment.

List the four functions of behavior: - ANS IS Social positive (attention/access), Social negative (escaping), Automatic Positive (sensory stimulation), Automatic Negative (pain attenuation)

A client gets out of his seat every time a demand is placed. When he gets out of his seat his teacher says, "Oh you need a break", and does not follow through with her demand. This client's out of seat behavior most likely serves what function? - ANS IS Social negative (escape)

A client frequently spits. You notice that he spits during work times, when he is on a break, when he is playing with his favorite toys, during meal times, when you or someone else is directly engaged with him, and even when he is by himself. One day mom brings the client back from the dentist where he had to get 6 cavities filled. After this dentist appointment the spitting stopped. What function does spitting most likely serve? - ANS IS Automatic negative (pain attenuation)

Every time his mother removes items from him, a client engages in a tantrum. Mom tries to ignore him but after around five minutes mom gives him back the item she removed and the tantrum immediately stops. What function is most likely maintaining the tantrums? - ANS IS Social Positive (attention/access)

A client hits other students in his class during work and break times. Each time he hits another student the teacher immediately provides a verbal reprimand. What function does his hitting most likely serve? - ANS IS Social Positive (attention/access)

You work with a client who drops legos on the floor for hours if left alone. The client does this even if others are playing with him, when no demands are being placed, and
