 the writer activist who inspired today's movements for social and racial justice In the era of Black Lives Matter Frantz Fanon tells the story of Fanon s stunning journey which has all the twists of a Cold War era thriller Fanon left his modest home in Martinique to fight in the French Army during World War II when the war was over he fell under the influence of independence struggle where he became a spokesman diplomat and clandestine strategist He died in 1961 while under the care of the CIA in a Maryland hospital Today Fanon s Black Skin White Masks and The Wretched of the Earth have become canonical texts of the Black and global radical imagination comparable to James Baldwin s essays in their influence And yet they are little understood In The Rebel s Clinic Shatz offers a dramatic reconstruction of Fanon s extraordinary life and a between memory and loss when it comes to subjects who do not fully matter as they should Taking her remarks on public examination of Louis Althusser s scene where the voice of police authority bellows Hey you there and creates the you that

Race and the Unconscious Celia Britton,2017-12-02 Freud is often accused of eurocentrism of making unjustifiable generalizations on the basis of European family structures Although French Caribbean intellectuals such as Fanon Césaire and Glissant have joined in these criticisms they have also made strikingly positive use of psychoanalysis Much intellectual energy has been invested in notions of repression the Oedipus complex and the psychoanalytic cure while at the same time Freudianism has been no less vigorously criticized for its political quietism and its potential as a means of social control Thus Freudian theory and the controversies it arouses remains a surprisingly persistent cultural element The crucial issue is the link between the unconscious and race In this groundbreaking study Britton looks at the different ways in which Freudian psychoanalysis has been incorporated into arguments about racial identity and difference in the French Caribbean

Elemental Difference and the Climate of the Body Emily Anne Parker,2021 In nineteenth century Europe differences among human bodies were understood to be matters of scientific classification At the height of scientific acceptance it was unthinkable that race or sex or diagnosis or indigence were invention Today however differences among human bodies are understood as matters of social construction The philosophy of social construction understands differences among humans to be matters of human imposition Social constructionism's way of understanding the origin of differences among humans is so well established as to have no currently viable alternatives even among new materialists social constructionism's most ardent critics This book argues that new materialists and social constructionists share a distinction between the political and the ecological Emily Anne Parker centers her argument on the philosophical concept of the polis according to which there is one complete human form It is this form that is to blame for our current political and ecological crisis Political hierarchies and ecological crises are often considered to be two different problems for example many speak of parallel problems climate change and racial injustice Parker argues that these are not parallel crises so much as one problem the polis The philosophy of the polis asserts that there is one complete human body and that body is meant to govern all other things In that sense there are not two crises but instead one concern to perceive the ways in which this tradition of the polis constrains the present Elemental difference in the polis is appreciated in the fact that empirical bodily non identity an Aristotelian concept can be called upon to elevate one group of bodies among the rest Parker builds from Sylvia Wynter who argues that the very idea of empirical bodily non identity begins with the modern science of racial anatomy or what Wynter calls biocentrism Parker argues that biocentrism is a feature of the polis according to which the one complete body was defined by its capacity for disembodied thought The sciences of racial anatomy are a more explicit commitment to biocentrism but the ranking of matter with respect to one complete human a body that is the site of supra natural thinking is a practice that has always characterized the polis In this way the polis is responsible for both political and ecological hierarchy It is as responsible for what is euphemistically called climate change as it is for the political hierarchy that constitutes it Elemental Difference and the Climate of the Body ultimately bridges the insights of social constructionism and new materialisms to create a philosophy of elemental difference Difference rather than needing to be either dismissed based on its social construction or reified in keeping with the hierarchies of the polis is crucial for addressing contemporary crises of the polis

Palimpsestic Memory Max Silverman, 2013-02-01 The interconnections between histories and memories of the Holocaust colonialism and extreme violence in post war French and Francophone fiction and film provide the central focus of this book It proposes a new model of palimpsestic memory which the author defines as the condensation of different spatio temporal traces to describe these interconnections and defines the poetics and the politics of this composite form In doing so it is argued that a poetics dependent on tropes and techniques such as metaphor allegory and montage establishes connections across space and time which oblige us to perceive cultural memory not in terms of its singular attachment to a particular event or bound to specific ethno cultural or national communities but as a dynamic process of transfer between different moments of racialized violence and between different cultural communities The structure of the book allows for both the theoretical elaboration of this paradigm for cultural memory and individual case studies of novels and films
