Section: How Species Interact with Each Other

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

An organism that lives in or on another organism and feeds on the other organism is a parasite. The organism the parasite takes its nourishment from is known as the host. The relationship between the parasite and its host is called parasitism. Examples of parasites are ticks, fleas, tapeworms, heartworms, blood sucking leeches, and mistletoe.

Photos of parasites may make you feel uneasy, because parasites are somewhat like predators. The differences between a parasite and a predator are that a parasite spends some of its life in or on the host, and that a parasite does not usually kill its host. In fact, the parasite has an evolutionary advantage if it allows its host to live longer. However, the host is often weakened by or exposed to disease from the parasite.
