Revaluing Horticultural Skills Hannah Pitt, 2024-11-29 This book highlights the value and skill of horticultural work through stories of food cultivation It examines the difficulties that arise from the perception that this type of activity is unskilled and the importance of acknowledging the expertise involved in growing food The book provides a rare focus on horticulture as a vital part of agri food systems offering a social science perspective on the sector's current and past characteristics It presents new primary research into horticultural work and workers across UK food growing using close attention to their abilities to highlight the depth of their knowledge and learning This is set in the context of global agri food regimes which press producers to seek ever more precarious labour undermining food justice By examining these in the context of internationally connected supply chains it characterises injustices which recur globally and across food system labour The conceptual argument starts from an ecological definition of skill as a social practice embedded within its socio economic landscape developing this perspective beyond its association with artisanal contexts Together the empirical and conceptual materials highlight the fallacy of discourse which tends to individualise skill and the challenges around recruitment into food production To counter this the book proposes a more collective approach to fostering healthy skills ecosystems reaching towards commoning through examples of horticultural communities seeking this in the meantime It will appeal to postgraduates researchers and professionals interested in food systems their workers and related topics of horticultural education training and human resources labour migration and politics of injustice It draws on perspectives from rural studies human geography and sociology and connects with international debates in these fields Food focused scholars and activists will find data and insights to support calls for better work in food systems Science Curriculum Resource Handbook ,1992 Te HS&T
