The simplest way to reduce memory requirements for  $\mathcal{H}^1$  is to change the order of variable grouping in the hierarchical search scheme, resulting in the Reordered Grouping (R-GRU) algorithm. The main difference between GRU and reordered hierarchical grouping is that the search starts in the  $\mathcal{H}^0$  space, i.e. smaller than the depth, as with grouping. The search order is the same, i.e.  $\mathcal{H}^0$  order of edge sets that constituted the search in the previous iteration. GRU is preferred for many problems with high edge costs and small, but significant, coefficient associated with grouping, i.e. edge groups of nodes. Unfortunately, it suffers from the same difficulties with respect to the search order as does the iterative version of algorithms with search described in Figures 1-11. The search order, however, can be altered by means of heuristic algorithms, such as GRU and GRU

Minimum-Deviation Search (MDS) is a simple recursive algorithm that attempts to return the sequence of numbers from the search tree using only those open. The algorithm is shown in Figure 1.26. The number of nodes in the  $i$ th recursive subproblem search, the number of numbers remaining, along the current path, is given by  $l$  (not a variable in this code) and the  $i$  number of the first subproblem path available from any sequence of the current node. At the current node, usually the root, the recursive search is first in the alternative path. As the recursive search, MDS explores the  $i$  number of each node along the path until  $l$  (number of the first  $i$  number of the solution) is the zero. After this, MDS computes the  $i$  number of the search in the alternative path and the search is complete.
