Introduction: The diagram illustrates the structure of a neuron, the basic building block of the nervous system. Neurons are responsible for transmitting information throughout the body. They consist of a cell body (soma), dendrites, and an axon.

Parts of a Neuron:

- Dendrites: These are branching structures that receive signals from other neurons or sensory receptors. They carry the signals toward the cell body.
- Cell Body (Soma): This is the central part of the neuron where the nucleus is located. It contains the genetic material and organelles necessary for the neuron's function.
- Axon: This is a long, thin projection that carries electrical impulses away from the cell body toward other neurons or muscles. It is covered by a myelin sheath.
- Myelin Sheath: This is a fatty layer that surrounds the axon, providing insulation and speeding up the transmission of electrical signals.
- Axon Terminals: These are the ends of the axon where signals are passed to other neurons or muscles.
