Neuroscience in Education Sergio Della Sala, Mike Anderson, 2012-04-05 In the past ten years there has been growing interest in applying our knowledge of the functioning of the human brain to the field of education including reading learning language and mathematics This has resulted in the development of a number of new practices in education some good some bad and some just crazy The good is nearly always sound cognitive research that has clear implications for educational practice The bad is the use of neuroscience jargon to lure the unwary and to give an apparent scientific aura to flawed educational programs with no evidence base and which no reputable neuroscientist would endorse The ugly is simplistic interpretation and misapplication of cognitive theories leading to errors in their application More and better could be done if neuroscientists and educationalists acknowledge the limits of their disciplines and start listening to each other Neuroscience in Education brings together an international group of leading psychologists neuroscientists educationalists and geneticists to critically review some of these new developments examining the science behind these practices the validity of the theories on which they are based and whether they work It will be fascinating reading for anyone involved in education including teachers psychologists neuroscientists and policy makers as well as interested parents

Childhood, Philosophy and Open Society Chi-Ming Lam, 2013-02-26 The purpose of this book is to develop a theory and practice of education from Karl Popper's non-justificationist philosophy for promoting an open society Specifically the book is designed to develop an educational programme for fostering critical thinking in children particularly when they are involved in group discussion The study conducted an experiment to assess the effectiveness of Matthew Lipman's Philosophy for Children P4C programme in promoting Hong Kong Chinese children's critical thinking Forty-two Secondary 1 students volunteered for the experiment from whom 28 students were randomly selected and randomly assigned to two groups of 14 each one receiving P4C lessons and the other receiving English lessons The students who were taught P4C were found to perform better in the reasoning test than those who were not to be capable of discussing philosophical problems in a competent way and to have a very positive attitude towards doing philosophy in the classroom It was also found that P4C played a major role in developing the students' critical thinking Considering that the construction of children by adults as incompetent in the sense of lacking reason maturity or independence reinforces the traditional structure of adult authority over children in society it runs counter to the goal of fostering critical thinking in children As a way to return justice to childhood and to effectively promote critical thinking in children the present study suggested reconstructing the concept of childhood highlighting the importance of establishing a coherent public policy on promotion of agency in children and also the importance of empowering them to participate actively in research legal and educational institutions
