

Half-Life Lab

Before this begins, find your other group and pass this document to a third, preexisting, group of your choice or print this page.

Purpose

The purpose of this hands-on lab is to model the concept of half-life using a simple, inexpensive radioactive source.

Materials

- 100 M&M's candies, pretzels, or other small, countable items with two distinct sides
- container or other small bag/pot to hold

Procedure

1. Place 100 candies in the shoe box, covered side up. The candies will stand for atoms of a hypothetical radioactive element.
2. Cover the box and shake it vigorously for three seconds. This is one time interval.
3. Remove the lid and check how many candies remained that have their two dark-shading faces down. These candies represent the atoms that "survived" during the time interval. Count and record in a table while the number of "disposed" atoms and the number of remaining, non-disposed, atoms.
4. Continue repeating steps two and three until all candies have "disposed" or you have completed 10 seconds in the shoe box.
5. Repeat the entire experiment (steps 1-4) at various times and record all data.

Physics is... F Todd Baker, 2016-12-21 He's back The physicist returns with an entirely new compilation of questions and answers from his long lived website where laypeople can ask questions about anything physics related This book focuses on adjectives practical beautiful surprising cool frivolous instead of nouns like the first two books atoms photons quanta mechanics relativity The answers within Physics Is are responses to people looking for answers to fascinating and often uninformed questions It covers topics such as sports electromagnetism gravitational theory special relativity superheroes videogames and science fiction These books are designed for laypeople and rely heavily on concepts rather than formalism That said they keep the physics correct and don't water down so expert physicists will find this book and its two companion titles fun reads They may actually recognize similar questions posed to them by friends and family As with the first two books Physics Is ends with a chapter with questions from people who think that The physicist is a psychic and from people who think they have the answers to life the universe and everything
