

Exercise: Simulating Mitosis and Fertilization

Objectives

- Understand the role chromosomes play in the process of reproduction.
- Simulate the process of Mitosis, and observe the phenomenon of "Crossing-Over".
- Explain these mitotic phenomena genetically.
- Simulate fertilization.
- Explain how sexual reproduction produces genetic diversity.

During exercise, you will use chromosome simulation kits for:

1. simulate the process of mitosis in a cell with a diploid number of 2n = 4
2. simulate fertilization using the gametes produced by that simulated mitosis.

You will work with a partner and the teacher will decide if you will be making eggs or spermatozoa. Most of the groups will be making eggs and half will be making spermatozoa. All the rest of members of groups will handle with spermatozoa or oocytes/fertilization.

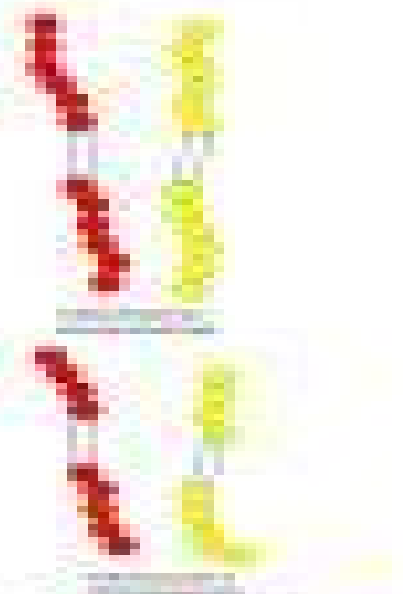

Chromosome preparation

• CHROMOSOME 1

Take one string of 22 red pig beads connected by magnetic connectors and ten strings of 42 yellow-pig beads connected by magnetic connectors. One of the red strings represents the chromosome contribution of one parent, and one of the yellow strings represents the chromosome contribution of the other parent. These two strings represent homologous chromosomes. The second yellow string stands for the second chromosome that pairs of these chromosomes after replication.

• CHROMOSOME 2

Take one string of 8 red pig beads connected by magnetic connectors and ten strings of 21 yellow-pig beads connected by magnetic connectors. One of the red strings represents the chromosome contribution of one parent, and one of the yellow strings represents the chromosome contribution of the other parent. These two strings represent homologous chromosomes. The second yellow string stands for the second chromosome that pairs of these chromosomes after replication.

5. Mitosis 1

a. egg phase

- Place one of each chromosome (one 22 red, and 12 yellow, and 8 red, and 21 yellow) together in the middle of your table table, standing for the heterochromatic label representative cell. For simplicity, you will not keep track of the magnetic connectors in this task. Observe that chromosomes in this stage should not be different structures and not as visible structures.
 - 1. How many total chromosomes are found in this cell?
 - 2. How many total molecules of DNA are found in this cell?
 - 3. Is this cell haploid or diploid?
 - 4. Which stage of the cell cycle is represented at this point? Give specific.
