

Introduction: The quality of transplantation from donors can be extremely wide and age is not always a reliable parameter of evaluation. Young donors should be carefully evaluated, in case of dubious clinical data, biopsy should be used to evaluate the graft and to decide whether to perform a double (DKT) or single (SKT) kidney transplant.

Method: We present a case report involving a young donor with an unexpected biopsy relative to his age. The recipient's follow-up data refer to six month post-transplant.

Results: A 49 years-old male (BMI 24.22 Kg/m²) affected from Type 1 Diabetes Mellitus, diabetic retinopathy treated by laser-therapy, diabetic nephropathy in peritoneal dialysis from 2017 to 2019, and already undergoing hemodialysis from 2019, was submitted to simultaneous pancreas kidney transplantation (SPK) from donor after brain death (DBD) in our center.

The donor was 43 years-old female (BMI 31.02 Kg/m²) apparently on good health, dead for cerebral hemorrhage, KDPI 46%, KDRI 0.96.

The HLA matching was negative.

CMV status was positive.

The donor's serum creatinine was 1.54 mg/dL, so kidney biopsies were performed. Biopsy score, following Remuzzi-Karpinski's evaluation, was 8/12 for each kidneys (glomerular sclerosis: 1/3, tubular atrophy: 2/3, interstitial fibrosis: 2/3, arterial narrowing: 3/3). SPK was completed with DKT in the iliac fossa bilaterally (left kidney in left iliac fossa and right kidney in right iliac fossa). Induction immunosuppression was obtained with Basiliximab (20 mg on day 0 and day 4) and methylprednisolone (500 mg on day 0). Maintenance of immunosuppression was based on tacrolimus (Envarsus®; Chiesi, Italy), micophenolic acid (720 mg twice a day) and low dose steroids. Cold ischemia time lasted 485 minutes for the pancreas, 600 and 825 minutes for the kidney, respectively. Recipient underwent to chest drainage placement on POD 7 due to pneumothorax. The following postoperative period was uneventful. Patient was discharged with serum creatinine 1.7 mg/dl that was 2 mg/dL to the last follow-up.

Conclusion: According to Remuzzi's criteria, the high biopsy score would not have allowed the transplant. I was also conflicting with the donor's age that would not have required a biopsy. However, it was decided to perform a DKT to improve the patient outcome rather than to perform a pancreas transplant alone (PTA) leaving the patient with end-stage renal failure. The donor kidney biopsy remains a very helpful tool in the evaluation of the graft. However, it is a data to be
